Wage Formula 'Booted'

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

A renewed demand for modification of the Little Steel wage formula by organized labor drew from President Roosevelt yesterday a promise to establish a three-man committee of War Labor Board members to study the adequacy of Government cost of living figures and report back in 60 days, top labor chiefs revealed after a two-hour White House conference.

The Little Steel formula permits a 15 per cent increase in wages since January 1, 1942, to compensate for increased living costs.

The labor leaders disclosed that they also concentrated their fire on power granted to Economic Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson to overrule decisions of the War Labor Board and railroad emergency panels.

Urges End of OES

Urging that the Office of Economic Stabilization be abolished, AFL President William Green explained that organized labor did not expect that much power over wages to be lodged with one man "when the no-strike pledge was given."

Appointment of the WLB Committee—to be composed of public, labor and management members—was suggested by the President after the labor spokesmen charged that Bureau of Labor Statistics cost of living figures did not picture the true rise in the cost of living, the labor leaders said.

Although no definite commitments were made, the labor spokesmen expressed the belief that completion of the report would open the way to revise the Little Steel formula upward—particularly if Congress fails to approve President Roosevelt's price rollback program.

The 60-day period will also provide the Administration a breathing spell on the wage front, observers pointed out.

A recent study of the American Statistical Association said the BLS index accurately reflected the average change in the cost of living throughout the Nation, but advised against its use as a guide to regional wage adjustments.

7.2 Per Cent Since May, 1942

BLS figures for August reveal a 4.7 per cent increase in the cost of living since September, 1942, base period of the Economic Stabilization Act, and a 7.2 per cent increase since May, 1942, base period for the 15 per cent Little Steel formula.

CIO President Philip Murray stated, "We discussed the Little Steel formula at great length and

Navy 'Rocking-Chair Fleet' Put Him in Office, Riebel Says

Post Staff Writer

At the conclusion of a dramatic all-day session in which he alternately shouted and wept, Frederick Riebel, Jr., former president of the Brewster Aeronautical Corp., told the House Naval Affairs Committee yesterday that he had been placed in office "by the rocking chair fleet."

He explained under questioning of Representative Hebert (Democrat) of Louisiana that the "rocking chair fleet" consisted of desk officers in the United States Navy, and explained that the Navy had used the power it had to withdraw a guarantee for 55 million dollars in V-loans to the Brewster company to force his election as president.

Advising Hebert to "use your noodle a bit," Riebel explained that anyone who was guarantor of a 55-million-dollar loan, could force the recipient to do his bidding, especially when failure to receive the money meant bankruptcy.

He explained further that he had suggested to the Navy that he could do a job at Brewster if he were made president.

Pressed by Hebert to explain who in the "rocking chair fleet" had been in consultation about his appointment, Riebel declared that decision to have him elected president followed a conference with Undersecretary James V. Forrestal, Assistant Secretary for Air Artemus L. Gates, other Navy officials and Henry Kaiser, West Coast production genius.

He said he received a salary of $30,000 a year, half that received by the previous president, who was also put in office by the Navy Department.

Previously Riebel had testified that he was placed in office by Kaiser, who asked for his resignation October 7, but he admitted that he had been introduced to Kaiser by the Navy Department.

The ex-president of Brewster spent several energetic hours in an attempt to show that Tom De Lorenzo, president of Local Union 365, UAW-CIO, and what he called "his gang of 40 thieves" were the only villians in the sordid Brewster story.

The committee adopted a motion to have the Department of Justice report what steps had been taken to institute prosecutions under the Smith-Connally Act for the strike

Dollars Pour Into District's War Fund Till

Halfway Point Is Almost Reached; 4 Divisions Report

Jumping overnight to within almost half of Washington's $4,800,000 goal, Community War Fund gifts yesterday totaled $2,254,232.94. More than $308,000 in additional donations was reported, as the Metropolitan Division released its first figures after one day of campaigning.

Generous increases in donations were reported also by the Advance Gifts, Business and Finance and Government Divisions at the first joint meeting of all Washington groups yesterday in the "Hall of Flags," United States Chamber of Commerce.

Additional combined reports will be given at meetings there next Monday, Wednesday and Friday—and on later dates, if the campaign has not hit the $4,800,000 mark by that time.

Coleman Jennings, Washington chairman, enthusiastic over yesterday's 8 per cent boost toward the 1944 fund goal, stated that, in effect, the campaign had just begun here. It was not until Wednesday that all four divisions were actively participating in the drive.

Chairmen of Washington area divisions reported gifts since figures released at 6 p. m. Wednesday as follows:

Advance Gifts, Abbot P. Mills: $92,295 more, for $401,862.29, 949

House Passes Bill to Abolish Ban on Chinese

Old Exclusion Act Repeal Voted, With Citizen Provision

The House yesterday voted overwhelmingly to wipe from the statutes more than a half century of Chinese exclusion legislation and to permit Chinese entry on the same 1920 population quota basis as other nationalities.

Action came on a voice vote after defeat of all restricting amendments. The bill was sent to the Senate, which, like the House, was enjoined by the presidential message to eliminate immigration discriminations resented by the Chinese and highly capitalized by Japanese propagandists.

Actually only 105 Chinese would be admitted annually under quota laws making immigration from any country proportionate to the number of persons of a given national origin living here in 1920.

Only China Barred

While all Asiatics have been excluded from entry, China was the only nation barred by name in exclusion laws dating back to 1882.

Legislation to remove the discrimination has been pending for months, but restrictionist interests opposing any relaxation of the immigration laws on economic grounds kept the bill pigeonholed in the Immigration Committee until recently.

Two major moves to modify the bill were launched in the House. Both failed. Representative John B. Bennett (Republican) of Michigan, one of four members who signed a committee minority report, offered an amendment repealing the Chinese exclusion laws but striking out any immigration quota for China. It was defeated by a standing vote of 128 to 21.

Representative Allen (Democrat) of Louisiana moved to halt immigration from any country whenever unemployment in this country exceeded a million persons. Allen said immigration should be stopped until Americans had been assured of employment in the postwar period. His amendment was knocked out on a point of order.

Couple Bitten by Rabid Pet Now Undergoing Treatment

By John Singerhoff
Post Staff Writer

Aaron L. Ford, counsel for the Smith Investigating Committee and a former Democratic Representative from Mississippi, and his wife are undergoing treatment for the prevention of rabies, it was learned last night.

The Fords, who live at 2210 Pennsylvania ave. nw., were both bitten by their pet Chihuahua last week. The dog, discovered to be rabid Monday, was destroyed Tuesday at the Pound.

Mrs. Gertrude Ford revealed her pet was nipped on the head by a half-grown female puppy, a black mongrel with white spots, in Washington Circle about three weeks ago. The location is just a few blocks from the home of the owner of a rabid dog which attacked two women Monday.

In nearby Maryland it was learned that University of Maryland tests proved a dog owned by Mrs. Myrtle V. Moore of 4437 Schley ave., Bradbury Heights, Md., had rabies. The dog acted queerly Tuesday night and Mrs. Moore called Upper Marlboro police. They destroyed the animal. The dog, Mrs. Moore said, had not bitten anyone.

Meanwhile in Washington the District Commissioners took no action yesterday in spite of the local outbreak in which 200 persons were bitten.

Senate Gets Compromise Peace Draft

Quick Passage Forecast as Foes Hit Resolution For "Ambiguity"

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

A 65-word foreign policy declaration, committing the United States to the principle of world collaboration to secure peace and prevent aggression, yesterday was hurried to the Senate by a 20-to-2 vote of the Foreign Relations Committee.

The middle-of-the-road compromise, unchanged from the form in which it left a subcommittee, was promptly reported to the Senate by Chairman Tom Connally. The Senate made it "unfinished business" and set start of debate for Monday.

The resolution promptly nosed into sniping from both isolationist and internationalist extremes, but leaders claimed the votes were in pocket and predicted passage by a treaty ratifying (two-thirds) majority, possibly by the end of the week.

Compromise Attacked

The compromise was immediately attacked as "all things to all men" by bipartisan advocates of a vigorous and definite postwar course. Their Ball-Burton-Hatch-Hill plan to tie the Senate specifically to an international organization with power to settle disputes peacefully if possible, with military force if necessary, was defeated in committee, 16 to 5.

In a joint statement, the so-called "B-2 H-2" Senators announced their intention to carry the fight for strengthening language to the Senate floor. They described the compromise as "studied ambiguity" that might mislead the country and our Allies. "Surely," they said, "the Senate is prepared to say something more definite and positive."

But the discreetly-worded resolution had split the isolationist camp wide open, and thereon hinged leadership hopes for an overwhelming vote. Only Senators Hiram Johnson (Republican) of California and LaFollette (Progressive) of Wisconsin voted against it, on a committee weighted with former Nationalists. Johnson and LaFollette opposed any Senate commitment.

Senator Nye (Republican) of North Dakota was among the 20 Senators voting for it.

Said Senator Pepper (Democrat) of Florida, who offered the unsuc-

Slight Gain Made Beyond Volturno; Berlin Reports New Landing Expected

By Wes Gallagher
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters, Algiers, Oct. 21.—Hopes of a quick Allied conquest of Rome faded tonight as Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's Fifth Army slogged forward at a slackened pace through muddy terrain a little more than 21 miles north of Naples, just 21 days after entering that port.

An average of a mile a day in country that was growing increasingly difficult, and against German resistance becoming correspondingly stronger placed the capture of the Eternal City, 100 airline miles away, a considerable distance in the future.

Yesterday Clark's augmented forces registered only slight gains north of the Volturno River as patrols probed into the enemy's new 27-mile-long defense line that follows the rugged Massico Ridge from the sea to Venafro. The soggy, devastated agricultural terrain posed terrific transport problems for the American and British Allies.

U. S. Losses 6774

(In Washington, Secretary of War Stmison said American forces in Italy lost 6774 men killed, wounded or missing before the Volturno fighting began. The total is considerably less than earlier estimates indicated.

(The Secretary told a news conference 879 Americans were killed, 3047 wounded and 2848 missing between September 8 and the opening of the Battle of the Volturno. Advices earlier in the month estimated the total at 8307—511 killed, 5428 wounded and 2368 missing. Stimson said indications are that British losses will be heavier than those of the United States.)

Nazis See New Landing

(The Berlin radio said Thursday night that "the possibility that the Allies are planning a further landing in Italy is envisaged" in Berlin. "German military quarters point out," said the broadcast, "that the Allies probably desired to make up for lost time and to compensate for the delay which has arisen in the south of Italy." Berlin Harassed

RAF Bombers Blast Leipzig, Nazi Rail Key to Russian Line

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 21.—The RAF's big night bombers flew into the heart of Germany last night and attacked Leipzig, third most important Nazi industrial center, and a key railroad junction for supplying the German armies on the Russian front.

A large force gave Leipzig its first large-scale blasting of the war with a loss of 17 planes, the same number as lost over Hanover on Monday.

Simultaneously the RAF's indefatigable and fast twin-engined Mosquitos again harassed Berlin and other western German cities in a campaign to "keep the sirens going" between knockout saturation raids.

Leipzig, a city of 700,000, lies almost on the Czech border 100 miles southwest of Berlin and more than 500 airline miles from London. Only Berlin and Hamburg are more important industrially to the German war machine.

Not since its sixth raid of the war—which was as long ago as November 23, 1940—had Leipzig been bombed. Since then many bombed-out plants in the Ruhr are believed to have been transplanted to the more remote Leipzig.

The city is known to have been turning out plane engines and to be assembling twin-engined Junkers-88 fighter-bombers—the type of craft making nuisance incursions into England—and Messerschmitt 109s, one of the Nazis' two chief single-engined fighters.

The raid undoubtedly disrupted assistance to the Nazis' crumbling Eastern Front. Leipsig is one of the world's biggest railroad terminals, with big freight yards on main lines running to important war production centers like Berlin and Kassel—both hit this month—and Regensburg, where Flying Fortresses in August battered another Messerschmitt plant.

The city also produces munitions, chemicals and machinery.

The operation of the RAF's eighth large-scale attack of the month, along with the Americans'

Moscow Parley Talks Declared Full and Frank

Military Leaders Again Sit In; Eden Received by Stalin

By Eddy Gilmore
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Oct. 21.—The American, British and Russian foreign ministers met again today, with United States and British military leaders once more in attendance, and a British spokesman said they were nearing the end of their "very frank and full" discussions on the first topic of the agreed agenda.

Maj. Gen. John R. Deane, new head of the permanent American military mission to Russia, and British Lieut. Gen. Hastings Ismay, chief staff officer for Prime Minister Churchill, entered the conference with Secretary of State Cordell Hull, Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, and Commissar for Foreign Affairs Vyascheslav Molotov.

Their presence for the second straight day and the British spokesman's declaration suggested the delegates were winding up the military subject—which the Russians have been so eager to discuss fully before other subjects were taken up.

(The Moscow radio, in a broadcast recorded by the Soviet monitor in London, said Premier Joseph Stalin received Eden today. Also at the meeting were Molotov and Sir Archibald J. C. Kerr, British Ambassador.)

(Later, the Moscow radio said Molotov received the new U. S. Ambassador, W. Averill Harriman, "in connection with the forthcoming presentation by him of his

Japs Battle To Reach Sea In New Guinea

Thousands Fight In Jungle Drive Near Finschhafen

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific (Friday), Oct. 22.—Japanese troops in the jungle northwest of Finschhafen, New Guinea, have advanced still farther by infiltration in a move disclosed for the first time today by an Allied spokesman as one intended to save their forces by reaching the coast.

The enemy drive, which precipitated a battle involving thousands of Japanese and Australians, is not presently aimed at recapturing Finschhafen, the spokesman said.

Although acknowledging some enemy progress for the third straight day, he explained their limited successes were due to infiltrating patrols sent out at night, with all frontal assaults bloodily repulsed.

Seeking Line on Song

The Japanese, moving out of the Sattelberg area 15 miles northwest of Finschhafen, are seeking to achieve a solid line along the Song River. Its mouth is five miles north of Finschhafen, the coastal base wrested from the enemy October 2.

Elements of Australia's Ninth Division are barring the way to the coast. These Aussies control areas on both sides of the Japanese positions, the spokesman said.

In one of the heaviest raids made recently by the Japanese, 30 planes harassed Australian positions around Finschhafen in the darkness of Wednesday morning from 1 a.m.

Dog, False Teeth Items Explained

99.95% of War Dept. Contracts Approved, Patterson Points Out

By the Associated Press

The running controversy between the War Department and the General Accounting Office over war contract payments entered its third round yesterday as Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson defended the propriety of charges for such items as false teeth and dog transportation.

Patterson made his second appearance before the House Military Committee in support of legislation to give the department final and conclusive authority in negotiating settlements of terminated contracts.

He said the GAO approved 99.95 per cent of War Department vouchers submitted in the four months ended August 31.

At issue in the dispute between Patterson and Lindsay C. Warren, head of the Accounting Office, is the question of whether Warren's agency should be permitted to audit negotiated settlements. Patterson insists that the delay would be fatal to industry waiting to have its war-invested capital unfrozen for peacetime business. Warren told the committee he could handle the situation promptly and efficiently.

Patterson's defense of allowance of a $225 payment for an extra set of false teeth and $1.39 for transportation of a family dog was in reply to Warren's charge that past action of Army contracting officers allowing such claims indicates the necessity for an audit by an independent agency.

One by one Patterson took up yesterday the items called to the committee's attention by Warren when he asserted that contracting officers were "inept and inefficient" and spent public money with "reckless abandon."

Patterson said "aside from items called to its attention by the War Department," the Accounting Office's disallowances total less than 10 cents per $1000 expenditure.

In 90 per cent of the cases Warren complained of, Patterson added, the items were subsequently allowed by Warren or were "brought to light" by the War Department itself.

The War Department and its officers, Patterson told the committee, have done a "careful and conscientious job" and "I resent the attack that has been made on the integrity of these men, on charges that are without foundation."

Explaining the item of the false teeth purchased for a contractor's employe, Patterson said the matter involved the Navy Department, not the Army. Under the contract, he said, the services of a mechanic

Prosecutor Places De Marigny Near Scene of Oakes' Murder

By the Associated Press

Nassau, Bahamas, Oct. 21.—In his first direct move to link Alfred de Marigny with the murder of Sir Harry Oakes, the crown's prosecutor brought out testimony today to place the handsome defendant near his father-in-law's estate last July about the time the millionaire was beaten and burned to death.

And from a native constable he produced a statement that de Marigny appeared, a few hours later, looking "excited and mad" and with a "wild look" in his eyes.

But while de Marigny smiled and nodded in the barred prisoner's cage where he must stay during the trial in the Bahamas Supreme Court, his attorneys scored points in the give-and-take.

Attorney General Eric Hallinan played his cards carefully to drive home to the jury the significance of his disclosures.

First, he drew from Nassau's coroner, Dr. L. W. Fitzmaurice, the estimate that Oakes was attacked and slain at Westbourne, his seaside estate, between 1:30 and 3:30 a. m. —"four to six hours after the completion of his last meal."

Then from the pretty wife of an RAF flier, he brought out testimony that De Marigny had left her and a friend at their home, two doors from Westbourne, shortly after 1 a. m.

Mrs. Dorothy Clark said that she and Mrs. Jean Ainslie were among the 11 guests of De Marigny at dinner the night of July 7 and that he drove them to the cottage they share.

Cross-examining Mrs. Clark, Chief Defense Counsel Godfrey Higgs sought to explain burned

50 More Villages In Dnieper Loop Fall to Russians; 1500 Nazis Killed

London (Friday), Oct. 22 (AP).—The Red Army plunged to within 23 miles of the industrial center of Krivoi Rog yesterday, rolling over 1500 German dead and through 50 more Dnieper River loop villages in a six-mile stride toward the Black Sea, Moscow announced today.

"The enemy is sustaining enormous losses and under the blows of our troops is retreating, abandoning arms and stores of war materiel," said a midnight communique supplement broadcast by Moscow and recorded by the Soviet monitor here.

While a Berlin spokesman admitted the southern German army was in an "extremely dangerous" plight, enmeshed in a giant Soviet pincers, the Russians also announced the capture of the center of embattled Melitopol, Crimean gateway far to the southeast, and fresh gains north of Kiev and southwest of Gomel.

In Melitopol, last major Axis position east of the lower Dnieper which is holding up the other arm of the Soviet pincers, the Russians said their units wiped out 1000 enemy troops and smashed German reinforcements in violent fighting.

The streets of the city were declared strewn with German dead, dozens of wrecked tanks, huge 88 mm. guns and other abandoned enemy equipment.

Nazis Hold Part of City

The Germans, however, still hold the northern side of the city, and Moscow dispatches said whole divisions of enemy troops still were rushing northward from the Crimea in an effort to hold the Russians.

Rattling their way toward Rechitsa, 28 miles west of Gomel in lower White Russia, the Russians knocked out six more German strongpoints, the communique said.

In an apparently belated reference to this Russian sweep across the middle Dnieper above Kiev, Berlin broadcasts asknowledged that 120,000 Russian troops, supported by hundreds of tanks, had smashed through German lines on a 3-mile front. Berlin has never acknowledged this new Russian crossing of the Dnieper, and the broadcast merely located the battle as "northwest of Chernigov."

Airfields on West Bank

The latest Soviet communique announced that Red army troops flanking Kiev on the north still were fighting to widen their positions across the Dnieper in that area. But battlefront dispatches relayed from Moscow said the Russians already had established airdromes on the west bank, and Soviet airmen were pounding Ger-

Russia Withdraws From Turkestan

New York, Oct. 21 (AP).—Soviet Russia has withdrawn "from the heartland of Asia"—China's great interior province of Sinkiang, or Turkestan—and the Chinese government has reassumed full authority there, a Time magazine correspondent reports in the current issue.

Theodore White, Time's Chungking correspondent, tells of this change, "a diplomatic feat as great as any in Chinese history, as significant as the abolition of extraterritoriality (in China) by the United States and Britain," after returning from the first visit to that little known territory by a foreign journalist in many years.

Nazis Frantically Fortify Balkans

Stockholm, Oct. 21 (AP).—Fearing Allied attack from three sides on the "under belly" of Europe, the Germans are making frantic anti-invasion preparation in the already nervous Balkans, according to Swiss reports reaching here tonight.

(Adding to Nazi fears of an invasion, American medium Mitchells and Lightning fighters stretched deep into the Balkans to wreck a roundhouse and locomotives at Nis in Yugoslavia, an important junction between Belgrade and Sofia. This was the second assault on rail targets in that area in the last few days, Skoplje, on the line from Nis to Salonika, Greece, being pounded.)

Field Marshal Erwin Rommel has established headquarters in Zagreb, and a Bern report to the newspaper Allehanda said Nazi troop trains were rolling continuously across northern Italy from France with troops to bolster German defenses in Yugoslavia where the patriots are playing havoc with Nazi forces.

A Zurich dispatch to the Aftonidningen said the Germans were looking for a possible Allied attack on Yugoslavia's west coast or through Albania, and also were preparing for a possible combined Soviet-British offensive through the Black Sea against Rumania and Bulgaria.

Rush Fortifications

Zurich reports said huge contingents of foreign workers were laboring on a series of concrete fortifications along the Rumanian and Bulgarian Black Sea coasts.

South of Odessa the defenses around the ports of Sulina, Constanta, Varna and Burgas have been given special attention, according to the latest reports.

Swiss dispatches said Rommel was reinforcing his Balkan units not only to prepare against an invasion but because of possibility the Nazis might not be able to depend on Hungarian and Bulgarian troops in case of an Allied landing.

Lack Good Weapons

Travelers from Hungary said the army was lacking in sufficient first-class weapons and equipment. New Hungarian contingents are being called up, but Hungary instead of sending the men to help Rommel was reinforcing the area around the disputed Siebenburgen district where they fear an attempt by Rumania to regain that territory.

Six Rumanian divisions are reported ready to try to invade the territory which the Hungarians got three years ago as a reward for joining the Axis.

Rumania officers, meanwhile, were reported complaining to the Germans about the lack of artillery at their disposal.

Gen. Ion Antonescu was reported in a Bern dispatch to Allehanda to be negotiating with German for the defense of Rumania.

Holland Jews Exiled

London, Oct. 21 (AP).—The Germans have deported every Jew they could find in Holland, Netherlands Premier Pieter S. Gerbrandy said tonight in a broadcast to his homeland over Radio Orange, the Dutch station here.

At the start of the war Holland had some 120,000 Jews, with another 60,000 persons having Jewish blood. It is estimated about 10,000 Jews are in hiding in the Netherlands, shielded by the sympathetic Dutch.

Madrid, Oct. 21 (AP).—French patriots wearing captured uniforms of the Vichy Youth Organization raided a German arms warehouse near Limoges to obtain the land mines which nearly caused the death of Fernand de Brinon, Vichy foreign minister, in his Chantilly home Monday night, reports from the French border said today.

De Brinon himself revealed the attempt on his life in an interview which was broadcast by the Paris radio. He said he was struck by a splinter on the cheek, while his secretary was seriously wounded in the chest.

14 Wounded U. S. Fliers on Exchange Ship

By International News Service

Gothenburg, Sweden, Oct. 21.—Fourteen wounded American airmen and soldiers who had been prisoners of the Nazis sailed for Britain as free men today on the hospital ship Atlantis.

They were part of the 4300 Allied wounded who have been exchanged for German wounded prisoners. All were in good spirits. They had few complaints as to the treatment they received at the hands of the Nazis.

The men voiced high praise for the Red Cross, and were particularly enthusiastic about the British volunteer doctors who tended them and who won great respect from the Germans.

The airmen went through Ermassfeld Hospital, which is under British medical control. Among them was Flying Sergt. William Milton of St. Louis, shot down in the first American raid on Bremen last April. Milton lost half a leg but was cheerful and healthy. He was slightly worried about the weight he had put on in five German hospitals.

Another airman was Technical Sergt. Norman C. Goodwin of Bradford, Mass. Goodwin, whose Flying Fortress was shot down over the North Sea June 25, was picked up by a German boat. He has lost a leg but he appeared cheerful.

Two officers were among the exchange prisoners. One was First Lieut. Albert W. Grass of Macon, Mass., who was brought down by a swarm of Nazi Messerschmitt fighters en route to Wilhelmshaven. He too came down in the North Sea and was picked up. Like Second Lieut. Glen Herrington of Ogden, Utah, who was shot down over St. Nazaire in January, he spent several months in the Luftwaffe Hospital in Paris.

Both officers had hair-raising escapes from exploding planes. They were hurled unconscious into the air and opened their parachutes just in the nick of time.

The exchanged Americans included two commandos who had volunteered with the Canadian Essex Regiment, Everett Ogelsby of Manila, Ark., and John Fleming of Highland Park, Mich.

It was hard to imagine more encouraging specimens than these Americans, mostly young boys. They have taken a lot of physical and moral suffering but they still keep smiling, every man of them.

Mormugao, Portuguese India, Oct. 21 (AP).—The Japanese exchange liner Teia Maru sailed for Japan today with Japanese nationals repatriated from the United States and Latin America.

The Gripsholm, aboard which the Japanese were brought here was expected to sail tomorrow with American nationals and other repatriates who arrived here on the Teia Maru.

The Japanese apparently were disgruntled over the crowded quarters on the Japanese ship in comparison with the spaciousness of the Gripsholm and they showed it by their manner.

As the Japanese ship began pulling away, the American repatriates let out a loud cheer which was answered briefly by the homeward-bound Japanese.

Exchange at Oran

Algiers, Oct. 21 (AP).—As a part of the American-British prisoners exchange with Germany, 3910 German wounded and protected personnel embarked on four vessels from Oran harbor this morning.

The Germans included 350 so badly wounded that they are out of the war and "protected" personnel such as doctors and stretcher bearers.

Stimson Lauds U. S. Troops of Jap Descent

By John G. Norris

American soldiers of Japanese descent who are fighting against the Germans along the road to Rome, "came through their first test under Nazi fire with flying colors," Secretary of War Stimson announced yesterday.

The troops form the 100th Infantry Battalion and they made up the spearhead of attack in Italy of a famous but unnamed American division which distinguished itself in the Battle of Tunisia.

Enlisted men of the battalion were all born in Hawaii of Japanese parentage. Some of the officers also are of Japanese ancestry though native Americans.

Reports from Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's Fifth Army, Stimson said, described the troops as typical American doughboys. The chief of staff of the division declared: "These men have been in battle and they're good. We like them."

Capt. Taro Suzuki of Honolulu, a reserve officer for 16 years—three years on active duty—led the first company to see action.

"It was our own fight," Suzuki reported to the War Department. "The company had to sink or swim by itself."

"Our leading scouts rounded a bend and three German machine guns opened up.

"You know what stopped all that Nazi wrath? Our little 60-mm. mortars. They went right in. Boy, it felt good to see them dropping. The machine gunners pulled out after the big guns quit and our riflemen started making rapid headway on them."

Bagging 19th Jap Makes Boyington Top Pacific Flier

Somewhere in the South Pacific, Oct. 21 (AP).—A former Flying Tiger now holds the No. 1 spot among the United States fliers now in action in the South Pacific.

By bagging three Japanese Zeros October 17 in a sweep over Kahili on Bougainville Island, Maj. Gregory Boyington, Marine ace from Okanogan, Wash., ran his total to 19.

The Washington veteran now stands tied for third place in the ratings to date for all combat pilots who have fought in the South Pacific.

Maj. Joe Foss tops the list with 26 planes downed, followed by First Lieut. Kenneth A. Walsh with 20 and Boyington and Maj. John L. Smith, veteran of earlier Guadalcanal air battles, tied at 10 each. Only Boyington still is on combat duty.

Way to Lose War

Knox Hits Apostles Of Disunity

Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox said last night that the only way the United Nations can lose the war is "to kick victory away through disunity" between America and Great Britain.

In a radio address reporting on his recent inspection trip through the European war theaters, Knox declared that he was "reassured and inspired by the spirit of get-together I encountered everywhere between the Americans and British" in England.

Without referring directly to the recent public debate aroused by statements, critical of the British, made by Senators who toured the war fronts, Knox warned:

"Those who seek to provoke and promote division, and jealousy, and hard feelings between us do the whole cause of civilization a great disservice. They are, in such conduct, perhaps unknowingly and ignorantly, aiding our enemies and making victory for us more difficult."

The Navy Secretary said that throughout Britain he talked to Britishers of all stations, from King George and the Prime Minister to the man on the street and in the ranks. From these contacts, he said, he became convinced that Britain is firmly determined to fight the war, both in Europe and in the Pacific, to complete and final victory.

Integration Plan Intrigues Tax Unit

Includes Lower Exemptions for Married Persons

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Drastic lowering of the personal income tax exemption for married persons was proposed in a secret session of the House Ways and Means Committee last night as part of a plan to integrate the Victory tax with the regular income tax structure.

The integration plan was presented at a two-hour night committee meeting at the Capitol by Colin F. Stam, chief of the congressional joint tax staff and creator of the Victory tax proposal which was written into the 1942 revenue act.

To $700-$800 Range

Stam's plan, members disclosed, called for lowering the married person's income tax exemption from the present $1200 mark to between $700 and $800, while leaving the present $500 exemption for single persons to remain at that level.

Along with the manipulation of exemptions, it was understood, Stam's plan called for revising the present rate tables of the income tax set-up in a way that would permit absorption of the victory tax and simplification of returns without at the same time releasing some nine million persons from payment of all income taxes, as the Treasury would have done.

Is Highly Praised

Stam was praised highly by members for his integration plan. The author, however, was barred by orders of Ways and Means Chairman Doughton (Democrat) of North Carolina from releasing details of the exemption and rate revisions.

Doughton told reporters that the committee had neither approved nor rejected anything, and declared that to disclose the line of discussion would subject the committee to a flood of "propaganda."

Some members indicated that committee acceptance of Stam's plan, and disclosure of its details by Chairman Doughton could be expected in the near future, possibly today.

No Great Burden Shift

One member described Stam's plan as "very ingenious," and predicted it would get very serious consideration. It was pointed out that the plan itself would not materially increase revenue, nor cause very much shift in present tax burdens.

The Treasury's program was attacked earlier as being drafted with an eye to the political effect of letting some nine million individuals out of paying all income levies.

Treasury tax representatives were not admitted to the committee's night session.

The effort to write new wartime tax legislation was saved from the brink of defeat yesterday after Doughton declared that Administration officials had promised to bend all efforts to economize.

On the assurance that expenditures would be "streamlined," the House Ways and Means Committee, which originates all revenue legislation, voted to continue work on a tax bill, but it gave no hint on how much, if any, additional revenue might be channeled to the Treasury. Previously it had been indicated the committee might not write any tax bill.

The committee vote to continue consideration of new tax legislation was reported unofficially to be 16 to 9.

Republicans, in revolt against further tax increases, contend 10 billion dollars can be saved through economy, without injury to any essential Government service.

In the Moonlight

2 Girls Duel With Knives Over Man

Los Angeles, Oct. 21 (AP).—How two teen-age girls, jousting over the affections of a married man, engaged in a moonlight hand-to-hand knife fight in which both combatants were injured, was related today by Detective Lieut. William G. Marr.

BETTY REEVES

The struggle, the detective said, was preceded by a formal challenge and was fought in the presence of "seconds" for each attractive belligerent. Identity of the married man was not revealed, Marr added.

Wounds in Her Arms

In a hospital with deep arm wounds is Doris Rhodd, 17, a telephone operator, and at home, nursing various nicks on her hands, is Betty Reeves, 19, a drugstore clerk.

Doris declined to see interviewers, but Lieutenant Marr said Miss Reeves in a statement to investigators said:

"Doris had been picking on me for a long time. She started going with a fellow I had gone with, and was always making cracks when she saw me."

Marr quoted Betty as describing the fight in this way.

"It was very dark there; only the moon was shining. It was about midnight. Doris was much larger than I, so I pulled out the knife and showed it to her, telling her 'I don't want any trouble.' Then she came at me with what looked like a letter opener, or a long thin knife.

Blood Began to Drip

"She threw me down and kept pulling at my hair. Suddenly there was blood dripping on my face, and I said: 'Please, Doris, don't let's fight any more. She was on top of me, trying to grab the knife, and I felt the blade cut my fingers."

At this point, Betty's second told detectives, "both girls got up and started crying about their wounds. Then we split up."

Marr said he planned no action until conferring with parents of both girls.

Tell of Throwing Switch

The other man is Jack Cochran, Norman's father. In the background is a wrecker clearing the tracks. Several of the 46 passengers on the train were injured, none seriously. Police said they planned no charges against the children, but that they would be taken before the Juvenile Court judge so that he could impress them with the seriousness of their act. The children said they saw the switch and thought it would be fun to throw it, not knowing that they were setting the stage for a wreck

General Richardson Restores Habeas Corpus in Hawaii

By the Associated Press

Honolulu, Oct. 21.—The controversy over the right of habeas corpus in wartime Hawaii evaporated today with the Army's announcement that two German-American internes held incommunicado had been released and that a general order suspending the right had been rescinded.

Federal Judge Delbert E. Metzger denied, however, the military government's motion that he vacate his order holding Lieut. Gen. Robert C. Richardson, jr., in contempt, although the court reduced the general's fine from $5,000 to $100.

In his capacity as military governor, General Richardson had issued the order forbidding habeas corpus action and, in effect, telling the court to forget the fine for the duration.

At issue was whether habeas corpus action remained suspended under partial martial law in the territory, thereby giving the military authorities the right to hold prisoners without trial.

When the two internees sought freedom via habeas corpus action the military refused to obey a court order to produce them in court for a hearing. Judge Metzger then held General Richardson in contempt. Richardson then issued a military order suspending the right of habeas corpus.

A series of conferences was held in August in Washington among officials of the Justice, War and Interior Departments concerning the controversy.

Edward J. Ennis, Special Assistant Attorney General, in asking the court today to vacate the contempt ruling, submitted a copy of a radiogram showing that Richardson had acted under instructions from Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff. These instructions from a superior officer Ennis contended, made it impossible for Richardson to obey a court.

In denying the motion, Judge Metzger observed: "Such instructions do not legally exculpate Gen. Richardson, but I consider that they greatly mitigate what appeared at the time to be flagrant, willful defiance of and disrespect to the court."

The court then reduced the fine.

Goebbels Asserts Home Front Now Better Than in '18

London, Oct. 21 (AP).—Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels attempted to assure the German home front today that the "tragic collapse" of 1918 could not be repeated.

"The Germans now have in sufficient abundance" that which they did not have in 1918 and resulted in their failure, he wrote in his newspaper, Das Reich, according to the Berlin radio.

Goebbels listed these abundances as "a political understanding of the fateful nature of this war, courage, endurance, steadfastness and tenacity."

He said that the Germans were well aware of the "temporary dangers" of their position, "but were not unaware at the same time of their strength and their resulting chances of victory."

Pelley Hits Wallace on Rails

By the Associated Press

John J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, asserted yesterday that Vice President Wallace "echoed old and discredited statements" in charging at Dallas Wednesday night that "public transport is again being brought under monopoly control."

"In his references to Wall Street control of the railroads," Pelley said in a statement, "Mr. Wallace is merely rattling the dry bones of ancient prejudices."

Pelley declared, too, that Wallace's address was "filled with statements that, by implication at least, reflect upon the competency, if not the integrity, of the Interstate Commerce Commission." He added that the ICC's "more than 50 years of honorable service speaks for itself. It is strong in the confidence of the country."

Among other charges Wallace made at Dallas were that transportation rates are excessive and discriminatory rates are keeping the South and the West in a colonial status.

The question of Southern and Western rates is before the Interstate Commerce Commission, Pelley said, adding "that body . . . can certainly be trusted to do justice to all sections."

"Mr. Wallace would have the public believe that railroad freight rates are unreasonably high," Pelley continued. "As a matter of fact they are the lowest in the world."

Officer Killed By Sentry's Shot At Colo. Army Post

Colorado Springs, Colo., Oct. 21. (AP).—Lieut. Joseph E. Hoenninger, 23, of Oxford, Pa., was killed by a sentinel early Wednesday on the Camp Carson Reservation, Camp Carson announced today.

The announcement said the investigating officer had reported Hoenninger's death occurred in line of duty.

Lieutenant Hoenninger, assigned to a medical detachment, was returning to camp in an automobile driven by Capt. Sam Fairchild at 6:20 a. m. Wednesday when the shooting occurred.

Captain Fairchild told investigators he had been given the recognition signal at the first of two sentry booths, and had approached the second slowly when he believed the sentinel there also had given him the go-ahead sign. The car had advanced about 100 yards when a bullet struck Hoenninger.

The sentinel, whose name was withheld, testified he did not recognize the car and did not authorize it to pass.

Admiral Cunningham Succeeded by Cousin

London, Oct. 21 (AP).—Admiral Sir John H. D. Cunningham has been appointed commander in chief of the Allied fleet in the Mediterranean, succeeding his distant cousin, Admiral of the Fleet Sir Andrew Browne Cunningham, it was announced today.

Sir Andrew was named first sea lord earlier this month. Sir John will serve as fleet commander under Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Allied commander in chief.

Faulty Strut Cause of Glider Crash Killing 10

Secretary of War Stimson reported yesterday an investigation indicated that faulty manufacture by a subcontractor and faulty inspection "combined to produce a fatal hidden defect in a wing strut metal fitting" of the glider which crashed at St. Louis August 1, carrying 10 persons to death.

As a result, Stimson said "Charles C. Latty, AAF inspector in charge at the Robertson Plant, and William A. Williams, AAF receiving inspector for parts assembled there, have resigned, although the air inspector's report did not fix any degree of responsibility for inspection failure on either one of them."

Maj. William B. Robertson, president of the company which built the glider, was among the 10 men killed in the crash.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

INSIDE the White House, word is being passed around that the President "has the old Dutch up" regarding food subsidies. He is determined to continue and increase his subsidy plan despite the negative action of the House Banking and Currency Committee which voted to ban most subsidies on food and other items after January 1.

One thing that has made the President sore is the report he got on what happened inside the Banking and Currency Committee. Two things occurred behind closed doors which never leaked out.

One was the method used by Chairman Henry B. Steagall of Alabama, sponsor of the bill, in keeping the legislation concealed from his Democratic colleagues until the last minute—so they had no chance to study its technical contents. Meanwhile, Steagall conferred at length with Representative James P. Wolcott of Michigan, ranking Republican of the committee, the day before the bill was considered.

Second unreported fact was how Steagall left a loophole for the protection of his own farmer constituents. The bill calls for continued subsidies on three commodities—soybeans, peanuts and cottonseed. Two of these, peanuts and cottonseed, are leading products of Steagall's Alabama district.

On the roll call, the committee's 11 Republicans lined up solidly with Steagall, plus 3 other Democrats and 1 Progressive, Representative Merlin Hull of Wisconsin. Ten Democrats, led by Representatives Wright Patman of Texas, Thomas Ford of California and James Wright of Pennsylvania, put up a vigorous fight against the farm bloc coalition but were outnumbered.

Runaway Inflation

PATMAN bluntly charged the Republicans with "condemning to death" the Administration's anti-inflation program "without even suggesting an alternative" to keep the lid on consumer prices. The big Texan said the Steagall bill would cause wild price increases on virtually all necessities and would cost American consumers 15 billions next year.

Pennsylvania's Representative Wright accused the Farm bloc Congressmen of "trying to force Congress to break the Little Steel wage-control formula."

"Nonagricultural citizens of this country are in a worse relative position, in terms of purchasing power, than before the war," the Pennsylvanian contended. "This bill, if enacted, would work an unbearable hardship on them."

Wright and Ford tangled hotly with blonde, effusive Congresswoman Jessie Sumner of Illinois and other farm blocers over Miss Sumner's charges that the Administration was attempting to "increase Federal control of agriculture" and "make the farmer subservient" through the subsidy program.

Ford Objects

FORD HIT BACK that proponents of the Steagall bill were trying to "raise everybody's grocery bill, while giving no thought to whether people can afford it."

The trouble with these alleged representatives of the farmer is that they want to eat their cake and still have it," thundered the Californian. "The Government is guaranteeing the farmer 90 per cent of parity for his crops for two years after the war. No other industry is protected like that. Certainly the wage earners have no such income guarantee. I object to giving immunity to one segment of the population, while other people have to take their chances."

Miss Sumner kept chastising the Democrats with barbed comments about increasing the national debt. At one point, apparently fearing she might be accused of partisanship, the lady from Illinois almost caused hysterics among the Democrats by declaring:

"I don't know anything about politics."

Congressman Patman, however was not impressed. After the Steagall bill was approved, 16 to 10, he declared in a loud voice: "This was a complete Republican victory."

Capital Chaff

CIO's Phil Murray is being wooed passionately by Democratic National Chairman Frank Walker. So far Murray, however, has been coy. He has a 7-point program he wants the Roosevelt Administration to adopt before he makes any commitment for 1944 . . . Meanwhile Murray has secured a terrific registration of labor votes all ready to cast their ballots one way or the other . . . Walter Reuther, of the United Automobile Workers, says, "We're not making a blind date for 1944."

New U. S. Ambassadors

PLANS are underway to appoint a raft of new United States Ambassadors abroad. They will be accredited to the exiled governments — Yugoslavia, Greece, Belgium, the Netherlands, etc.—and will take over part of the work of Tennis-champion Tony Biddle, who has the job of representing us with all these governments in London.

Some of these governments have intimated that they find it embarrassing to talk with Biddle, because, through no fault of his, he deals with so many governments that their claims and ambitions conflict. Also two of the exiled governments—Greece and Yugoslavia—have moved to Cairo.

Note: Democratic Chairman Frank Walker is licking his chops at the thought of new diplomatic patronage.

Merry-Go-Round

While Cordell Hull is in Russia, plans are being made to perform more surgical operations on the State Department. A new assistant secretary for Latin American affairs will be created, the job probably going to Brain Truster Adolf Berle or able Norman Armour, U. S. Ambassador to Argentina . . . It has escaped the headlines, but Assistant Attorney General Wendell Berge, in charge of trustbusting, has been giving the Kilgore Committee some warnings re future cartels which rival fire-eating Thurman Arnold's fulminations . . . News-sleuth Congressman Hebert of Louisiana is certainly kept busy with congressional investigations. Having finished a pipe-line investigation he was immediately slapped on the Naval Affairs investigation of the Brewster airplane plant. Hebert got his sleuth-training as news editor of the New Orleans States.

Chinese Halt Japs' Assault

Chungking Oct. 21 (AP).—The Chinese high command, following up its declaration yesterday that the Japanese offensive along the Burma Road in southwestern China had not succeeded in pushing across the Salween River, indicated today that a three-pronged, eight-day Japanese drive had been halted, at least temporarily.

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's headquarters reported no change in the positions there.

With the apparent halting of their drive from Burma, the Japanese forces on the east China front opened an offensive south from Siaofeng in western Chekiang province, the Chinese reported without indicating the size of the enemy drive.

(In Burma, meanwhile, a British communique reported a resumption of long-absent Japanese aerial activity on a large scale. It said Japanese bombers, attempting to raid Allied bases, were intercepted before reaching Chittagong and forced to jettison their bombs.

RAF bombers, however, continued their pre-offensive pounding of Japanese bases with dive-bomber and fighter-bomber attacks on positions near Kalemyo and Kalewa in Burma.)

Another Shift In Argentina Cabinet Reported

Buenos Aires, Oct. 21 (AP).—Gen. Alberto Gilbert resigned today as Minister of the Interior and was appointed Foreign Minister to replace Segundo Storni, who resigned September 9 after the United States refused lend-lease aid to Argentina.

(Gilbert's change of posts came on the heels of other shifts in the Argentine cabinet, reported in dispatches from neighboring nations to have been at odds over the maintenance of neutrality and diplomatic relations with the Axis, as well as such domestic issues as press censorship.)

Mountbatten Ends Talks With Allies

Chungking, Oct. 21 (AP).—Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, supreme Allied commander in southeast Asia, has completed a series of three-power talks in Chungking with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek and Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, American chief in Burma and China, it may now be disclosed. Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, commanding general of the Army Service of Supply, was high among the consultants.

Brown Quits OPA; Bowles May Run It

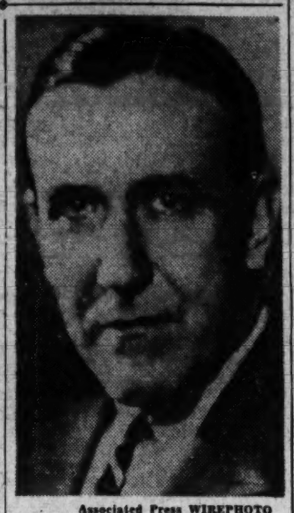
Agency Head Sees Rising Cost of Living Halted

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown, 54-year-old former Senator from Michigan who succeeded Leon Henderson as chief of the embattled OPA, resigned yesterday after telling President Roosevelt the agency has halted the upward trend in the cost of living.

His long-rumored withdrawal from the price and ration post was announced at the White House and became effective immediately, Brown declaring he hoped "to do nothing for the next month or two."

It is expected he will be succeeded by Chester Bowles, New York advertising man who has been general manager of OPA since July. The White House indicated Bowles' nomination would be sent to Congress within a day or so.



Associated Press WIREPHOTO
CHESTER BOWLES

Never happy in his job as a "Federal bureaucrat," the likeable former Senator stayed with OPA during hectic reorganization days following Henderson's resignation and the forced exit of numerous "professors and economists" only because the President urged him to do so—and because it took him some time to find a "competent businessman" willing to accept OPA's general managership.

In his six-page letter of resignation he declared the agency now is in safe administrative hands and expressed the opinion price control has been a success and is appreciated by the country.

Two big legislative hurdles lie ahead of it, however, he told the President. These are the question of continuing subsidies to keep living costs under control—a subject on which Congress already is divided—and that of continuing the life of OPA, now operating under legislation due to expire July 1.

After leaving a two-hour conference with President Roosevelt on wages and the cost of living, AFL President William Green expressed agreeable surprise when reporters informed him that the President had announced Brown's resignation. A few weeks ago, Green had demanded that Brown be fired unless he rolled back prices.

Chester Bowles, a vigorous executive apparently unafraid of Government red tape, is in the midst of a campaign to give OPA a good name with the public and is continuing Brown's idea that the agency should be organized and administered on a "common sense" basis. He was OPA director for Connecticut for 20 months before being persuaded to come to Washington and take over as general manager for the national administrator.

Brown's resignation was dated Tuesday and had been in the hands of War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes, who also urged him to continue in the Administration. The mobilization director and Brown saw the President together just before the resignation was announced.

The retiring OPA chief, who was defeated for reelection last year, has interests in banking, a transit company and a law firm in his home State. He has been reported scheduled for a Federal Reserve Banking post, but this is not considered in the immediate offing. He left Washington last night for Michigan.

Brown, in his letter of resignation, strongly defended the draft record of OPA, declaring a recent check showed only five draft-age men out of 4206 employes in the Washington office and only two in the field staff of approximately 49,000.

About the subsidy question he declared: "Without a subsidy plan the price structure cannot be held and wages will be forced upward. No thinking person can deny that the increase in prices and wages, if we reject subsidies, will greatly outrun the cost to the Government of subsidies.

"If it were merely a question of the subsidy money against the increase in price, it would be of little consequence. The danger lies in the impetus to higher prices gives to the wage demands.

Apple Shippers To Get Subsidies

To make possible OPA's recently-announced national price ceiling for apples, the Department of Agriculture yesterday announced transportation costs of the fruit would be equalized throughout the country by subsidy payments to shippers.

As Pacific Northwest apples customarily are shipped to Central and Eastern markets, these payments will have the "effect of maintaining normal distribution," the department said. The national retail price—one of the first put into effect—will average between 10 and 11 cents throughout the winter, OPA said.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN
Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

2 District Men Killed in Action

Two Washington men, Lieut. William Walter G. Lyda, and Tech. Fifth Grade Joseph H. Estes, jr., have been killed in the line of duty, according to announcements received by their families. In addition the War Department has announced that Lieut. Miles Crisler McCormack is missing in action and that Pvt. Albert L. Checkston was wounded while engaged in battle in the North African theater of the war.

McCormack

Lieutenant Lyda, 22, USMC, former track star, was killed in a plane crash Monday at El Toro, Calif., where he was attached to a dive bomber squadron, Marine Corps officials have informed his mother, Mrs. Nora Lyda, 3715 Appleton st. nw.

Born in Oklahoma and a graduate of Oklahoma University, he was a member of the University's medley relay team which set a world record in the Drake relays at Des Moines, Iowa, in 1942. At the Big Six Conference track and field meet the same year, he bettered a 11 year record by running the 440 in 48 seconds and later he won the national intercollegiate 880.

Three Brothers in Service

He entered the Navy as an aviation cadet immediately following his graduation from Oklahoma University and was stationed at the Naval Air Station in Anacostia from October 1942 to January of this year. Commissioned a lieutenant in the Marine Corps at Pensacola, Fla., he received additional training at the Great Lakes Naval Aircraft Carrier Training School before being transferred to El Toro. He has three brothers in the service: James Claude, a twin brother, now a naval aviation cadet at Corpus Christi, Texas; Herman, with the Army Air Forces in Australia; and Harold, who is assigned to the Naval Air Transport at Kansas City, Mo.

Estes Died of Wounds

Technician Estes, 26, a native of Washington, attended Gordon Junior High School and was employed by the American Ice Co. as a driver before enlisting with the Signal Corps in March, 1942. Overseas for six months, he died of wounds received in battle September 25. His grandmother, Mrs. Eva Estes, and his sister, Mrs. Bertha M. Atwell, both of 3213 M st. nw. learned that he was stationed in New Guinea, and was attached to the corps of engineers. A radio operator, he was trained at Camp Crowder, Missouri and Tyler Commercial College in Texas, where he was sent by the Army to learn radio code.

Lieutenant McCormack, 2545 Waterside dr. nw., has been missing in a bombing raid over German territory since October 9, according to word received by his parents, Col. and Mrs. Edward J. McCormack.

The 22-year-old pilot had been overseas less than a month. A graduate of Sewanee Military Academy, where he was named outstanding cadet and served as commander of the corps, he attended American University for two years before enlisting in the Army, January, 1942.

Before leaving for active duty, he told his mother, who composed the song, "Boy Out There," in his honor, that if he was ever reported missing, she was not to worry because with fine training and the equipment at his command, he was sure to come through safely.

Father Served Also

An older brother, Capt. John C. McCormack, is now on field maneuvers with the field artillery in Oregon, and a younger brother, Malcom is a cadet at Western High School. Colonel McCormack served with the field artillery during the first World War and is now associate deputy director of the Smaller War Plants Corp.

LYDA

Private Checkston, 31, a native of Philadelphia, operated the American Linoleum Remodeling Co. in Hyattsville before entering the Army in May, 1942. He trained at Camp Landing, Fla., and Camp Edwards, Mass., before he was sent to Africa last April. Injured on September 9 by a German tracer bullet, he is now recovering in an Army hospital in North Africa. He recently wrote to his wife, Mrs. Evelyn S. Checkston, 4809 4th st. nw., that it was a great disappointment to be injured in the early stages of battle after having received so much training, and that he hoped to return to his outfit in the near future.

Catholic U. Boys Show Battle Tricks

Catholic University students instructed in technics of unarmed combat by Joseph Chiang, Washington correspondent for Chinese News Service, gave demonstrations on the campus under his direction yesterday.

Chiang's specialty is teaching a typical Chinese method of unarmed offense and defense against armed opponents, a system that combines the more bloody aspects of mayhem, coupled with neat tricks in bone breaking, eye gouging and neck cracking with emphasis on death for the victim.

Best described as a means of taking advantage of an opponent's movements and weight, Chiang's work resembles jiu jitsu and judo, but has elementary difference.

Chiang and his students, all members of the university military unit, showed teehnics used in disarming and crippling a charging bayoneteer, knife seizures and pistol disarming.

Chiang learned his lethal strategies from Chinese monks in Foochow, China, where he was born. He is a graduate of Creighton University, Omaha, Nebr.

Truman Group Calls McNutt To Explain Dallas Plant Action

By the Associated Press

Chairman Truman (Democrat) of Missouri announced yesterday that Paul V. McNutt, War Manpower Commission chairman, will be called before the Senate War Investigating Committee next Thursday to explain his handling of the manpower problem at the North American Aviation plant, Dallas, Tex.

In the meantime, Truman said in a statement, Charles E. Wilson, executive vice chairman of the War Production Board, will go to Dallas personally to study the production situation with a view to recommending action necessary "to better utilize labor."

A Truman subcommittee on aircraft recently investigated charges the plant was not operating efficiently or utilizing the employe it has.

The record of the testimony of 250 witnesses in closed hearings was turned over to Wilson because of his knowledge of the aircraft industry, Truman added.

The Senator said that the Manpower Commission's efforts to deal with the condition by declaring Dallas a "critical labor area" did not "increase the labor supply."

"Mr. Wilson has informed the committee that in his opinion the North American plant at Dallas cannot usefully employ more men, except for replacements, until it has increased the efficiency of its operations," said the statement.

"The Truman committee has attempted to inform Mr. McNutt of the results of its investigation at Dallas and has told him of Mr. Wilson's position. . . .

"McNutt will be asked to explain his methods of dealing with the manpower problem and the basis for his decisions with respect to Dallas and the North American Aviation plant."

Group Collects 53,160 Pounds of Paper in Southeast

A total of 53,160 pounds of waste paper was collected in Southeast Washington Saturday despite the rain that prevailed during half the day, the D.C. Salvage Committee reported yesterday.

While this collection was not as successful as the first roundup, increases were noted in Congress Heights, Anacostia, Bradbury Heights, Bellevue Green, Washington Highlands and Hillcrest.

Donors are urged to place their waste paper on front porches before 9 a. m. Paper must not be permitted to get wet as dealers are unable to handle waterlogged paper. The drive shifts to Southwest Washington tomorrow.

"I'd like to serve you the whiskey you want!"

"I'm a liquor retailer.

My business has been built by serving my customers what they want, the way they want it.

When this war is finally won—I hope to have a secure and permanent business built on the good-will of my customers.

Right now, the war comes first. And, frankly, I can't always sell you just what you want. But that doesn't keep me from trying.

Take Calvert Whiskey for example: Many customers prefer it—and ask for it. Sometimes I have to say, 'Sorry, I have none today. More is expected in a few days.'

But that's not because Calvert is holding out on me—or you. Calvert hasn't distilled whiskey for a year—they've been distilling nothing but war alcohol for munitions, rubber, anaesthetics and medicine.

On top of that, more people than ever ask for Calvert these days. They know it is prewar quality in every way. When I get a shipment of Calvert Whiskey, it has been drawn from precious reserves—set aside for future years.

I get my share of it. I try to see that my customers get their share. If you'll just keep asking for the Calvert brand you want—I'll keep trying to supply you."

Davis Balks At 37½c of Miners' Boost

By the Associated Press

Chairman W. H. Davis of the War Labor Board said yesterday the proposed contract for Illinois soft coal miners apparently would result in an outright wage increase of 37½ cents daily without justification.

Accordingly, he declared while presiding at a WLB hearing on the issue, such a boost would have to be reconciled with the national stabilization program before the board could approve it.

Davis' statement came at the close of a day-long hearing, during which Appalachian and Alabama operators expressed united opposition to the proposed contract, which would increase earnings of the Illinois miners $1.50 to $1.75 daily. One of them, however, offered an alternate proposal calling for an 88-cent boost.

Davis said he based his estimate about the wage increase on "the best figures obtainable, which show the average travel time in Illinois to be 45 minutes."

Figures Extra Pay

Thus, under the new contract, which is on a seven-hour base but runs to eight and a half hours to include underground travel time, a man would actually be working only 45 minutes extra. Accordingly, Davis added, for that three-quarters of an hour at the rate of time and a half the compensation would be $1.12½. However, the proposed Illinois agreement provides a boost of $1.50, so there is a differential of 37½ cents, he said. Davis did not elaborate on these figures.

Crampton Harris, United Mine Workers counsel, declared that "travel time is work time and all we are seeking with this contract is to do away with a fundamental inequality and provide simple justice for the men who work the longest hours."

D. A. Thomas spoke briefly for Alabama operators, estimating the proposed Illinois agreement would result in a minimum boost of 56 cents per ton in the cost of producing coal if applied to his area.

7½ Hour Day Proposed

R. L. Ireland, representing Northern Appalachian operators, suggested that WLB order a 7½-hour work day, with time and one-half pay after seven hours instead of approving the agreement between the United Mine Workers and the Illinois coal operators, which would provide an 8½-hour day by including underground travel time.

He stressed the importance of the board's decision, declaring "the mine workers regard the Illinois agreement as a pattern applicable to the whole industry."

Ireland said the 7½-hour day will produce the necessary increased production to meet the Nation's needs if the mine workers will work, and if they won't work no length of work day will produce the necessary tonnage."

He added that, with the 88-cent gain in miners' earnings in the Appalachian area, his proposal would result in an increase in cost of coal a ton of from 10½ cents to 14 cents. Under the proposed Illinois agreement coal prices would raise 50 cents a ton, he declared.

E. R. Burke, representing the Southern operators, termed the Illinois contract "the worst proposal yet placed before this board," and said it "would require a radical and revolutionary change in the long-established method of computing pay.

Ireland and Burke testified the Illinois agreement deals with less than 6½ per cent of the Nation's production, and joined in expressing similar reasons for their opposition to it, as follows:

1. "It is a subterfuge to cover a wage increase in clear violation of the stabilization program.

2. "Its approval would go far to destroy the whole effort to control inflation since every labor organization in the country would demand similar increases and also coal prices would be raised considerably.

3. "The contract will not increase production in the Appalachian area, but on the contrary will cause a reduction, because of the chaos which would result in the industry."

Morgenthau, Praising Soldiers in Italy, Assures Them of Support Back Home

By Relman Morin
Associated Press Staff Writer

With The Fifth Army In Italy, Oct. 21.—Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau traveled through forward areas of the Italian front with Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark today and had high praise for British and American soldiers and for AMG's work in restoring the city of Naples.

"I am much struck by the young British and American soldiers," he said. "Their faces seemed so alert and they were so evidently in the pink of condition that they seem to be ready for anything."

The Secretary noted that water service was being restored in Naples.

"I can assure General Clark that the fighting forces have nothing to worry about the people at home," he added. "They are solemnly behind the war and they'll provide every dollar and every piece of material—and that means a good many dollars and lots of material—necessary to bring about complete victory.

"My trip to the front has been one of the greatest experience of my life. I am filled with new zeal and enthusiasm and I am going home to tackle the fourth war loan in the aggressive spirit of General Clark's Fifth Army."

The Secretary voiced horror over the sufferings of the Italians and declared, "The people in America should get down on their knees and thank God that such things are not happening there. We haven't really begun to make sacrifices in the United States yet. In contrast with what I've seen today our little annoyances seem so small.

"All day I was impressed with the evidence of the ruthlessness of the German enemy—their murder of innocent civilians, the peaceful farm buildings and crops they've destroyed, the homes they have ruined. The people at home should see these things."

Lose Gas Rations

Santiago, Chile, Oct. 21 (AP).—The Chilean government has ordered the cancellation of gasoline rations to 200 motorists who refuse to employ chauffeurs under a plan to relieve unemployment, Socialist Deputy Luiz Gonzalez asserted today.

WHEN YOU FEEL "BLAH"
and are "off your feed"
Has your appetite gone back on you? Is it showing itself in the way you look and feel? Are you pale and underweight? Do you tire easily, and lack the strength and pep to really enjoy life? . . . Then you ought to do something about it!
Often these conditions are due to nutritional anemia—a shortage of iron in the blood. In such cases, good old Gude's Pepto-Mangan can be very beneficial. Pepto-Mangan helps make the blood redder and richer in iron. Many doctors prescribe Pepto-Mangan for pale, weak, rundown men, women and children who need more iron to build them up and to help them get back their strength, appetite and pep.
Has proved its benefits for more than 50 years. Pleasant to take. Sold by all druggists with a money-back guarantee of satisfaction. Ask for the original and only Gude's Pepto-Mangan!

With Mary Harris

A NEW KIND OF REVUE is going on in the Sazerac Room of the Old New Orleans. Sagacious Garry Gerry and Julian Richards put their heads together, told Les Williams to go out and not come back until he'd found some rarities in sepia talent. At the auditions we found an amazing cluster of entertainers. A choir and quartet were unbelievably mellow. A tall tap stepper did as fine a Bill Robinson as anyone ever saw. And there was a dance team—prophesying is bad business—but if they don't wind up as stars it'll never be because they haven't everything on the ball, including the faculty of shocking the daylights out of the customers in a tasteful way. Les Williams, a splendid musician, deserves a fedora of laurels for assembling the show.

Doris Taylor, willowy young singer with Carr's band at the Madrillon, has taken over the NBC

radio spot occupied by Eve Knight when she was at the King Cole Room.

JACKIE GREEN, new star at Paul Young's, looks like Franchot Tone's little brother, but, as Eddie Cantor, his eyes pop like marbles. Later he becomes more like Jimmy Durante than Durante himself . . . Bob Preble, singing emcee at P. Y.'s, tells us that when he and Ted Bucolo went to the Shoreham recently, Barnee presented them as the composers of "Pistol Packin' Mamma." So they were besieged by innocent folk asking for autographs and tendering congratulations.

THE WORLD SERIES still reverberates around town. Bill Kavakos, owner of Kavakos Grill, is back with stories of having had the time of his life . . . Joe Maas, partner in Treasure Island, found Manhattan entertainment stuffy. So he called Chago Rodriguez from Washington to sing for him and his pals after the ball games every day.

Washie Bratcher's publicity greyhound calls up to say that the maestro has bought new music stands and orchestra uniforms in an identical shade of cherry red. A California sunset will have nothing on the bandstand in the Washington Hotel's ballroom, it seems.

ABOUT THE GIRLS. Carole Page, new singer in the Mayflower Lounge, used to warble with the bands of Frankie Masters and Tommy Tucker . . . Kay Arden of the Neptune Room creates the illusion of a duo when she plays solovox with her right hand, does a fast piano "boogie-woogie" with her left . . . Greta Van Kirk, pianist at Restaurant "400," is dazzling beholders with a new emerald gown liberally embroidered in silver . . . Jane Marlow, violinist at Restaurant "823," is getting so tiny that she now wears a size 11. "But what'll I do about the clothes I had before I started thinning down?" she wails . . . Lotus' Joan Baker used to dance in "Sons o' Fun" with Olsen and Johnson . . . Maybe we shouldn't tell, but Dena Larena, the stunning soprano of Balalaika, is married to Mischa Bess, owner of the spot . . . Mary Pierson, star of Ciro's "Friday Musical Nights," has a beautifully trained soprano that's at its best in operatic airs . . . Popular Ida Clark of the Mayfair has to play requests for all of her program . . . Georgia of the Anchor Room gives a pretty comedy touch to her songs . . .

George Washington Quinn, 73-year-old head mixologist of the Lounge Riviera, who retired last year amid a shower of good wishes and gifts, is back again at Riviera. "Rest doesn't agree with a youngster like me," says chipper G. W. Quinn.

RECOMMENDED — BUT HIGHLY. The songs of Ray Marshall and Bob D'Arcy at Burt's Trans-Lux . . . Those celestial little egg rolls at Ruby Foo's . . . An evening at River Bend, where George Stein has been playing ever since Roosevelt's first term . . . Both the steaks and Ralph Hawkins' jive specials at Crossroads . . . Dancing youngsters tell us that you can't go wrong if you do your stepping at either the Nightingale down Alexandria way or the Louisiana over in Georgetown.

Fighters Seen In Vital Church Role After War

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

When "Johnny comes marching home," he will play a vital role in Christianity's future, Dr. D. A. McCall last night predicted at Fountain Memorial Baptist Church, Naylor rd. and Q st. se.

Addressing one of 30 services of city-wide Baptist evangelistic drive, Dr. McCall said that the war experiences of our fighting men, their contacts with chaplains, and their observations of the church's work abroad had given them a new respect for the church.

Dr. McCall, executive secretary of the Mississippi Baptist Convention of 300,000 members and 1600 churches, said that he did not agree with "apostles of despair" that the church was losing ground.

He pointed out that Mississippi Baptists gave a record amount of $700,000 last year to evangelism and missions, and that church attendance is rising throughout the Nation. Dr. McCall was presented by the Rev. W. Bertram King, pastor.

Surprise visitor at the service was Army Air Force Chaplain William C. Taggart, a Baptist pastor formerly of Wichita Falls, Tex., who tomorrow will receive a citation by the National Conference of Christians and Jews for his contributions to religion in the service.

Chaplain Taggart served with the Nineteenth Bombardiers in Java and was more recently stationed in Miami Beach, Fla. Honors will be conferred on him tomorrow in conjunction with publication of the book, "My Fighting Congregation," of which he is coauthor.

He told the gathering that "soldiers do things by the power of God" that are almost humanly impossible.

The Rev. Vance Havner, evangelist from Greensboro, N. C., told the congregation at Metropolitan Baptist Church, 6th and A sts. ne., that what the world needs is "not more religion but more gospel."

Declaring that only a genuine revival of religion in men's hearts could save the world today, Mr. Havner charged that "experts with 'Rube Goldberg' eyes got us into this mess but have not been able to get us out."

Soldier's Trek To Altar Aided By Attorney

The District Bar Association played cupid yesterday and as a result Attorney William Jeff Lichtenberg was a foster-father for exactly four minutes.

It was caused by the efforts of Corpl. Adolph N. Sanzi, 20, of Uniontown, Pa., to get married to Claire Austran, 20, of Latrobe, Pa. When he applied 30 days ago for his license, he was told he would have to get the consent of his parents. Having no parents, he was told to get consent of his guardian. But he has no guardian either.

He was in a delemma until Monday when he was referred to Lichtenberg, who is chairman of the Bar Association Committee of Legal Assistance to Servicemen. Lichtenberg first was going to argue the case on a legal technicality, but he decided to become Sanzi's guardian instead.

So Justice F. Dickinson Letts of District Court appointed Lichtenberg guardian for purposes of consent only, and it took Lichtenberg only four minutes to reach the marriage License Bureau, where he quickly consented to the marriage, thereby ridding himself of his new role.

Then Sanzi and his bride-to-be hurried to Georgetown University, where he is stationed. There they were married by the chaplain.

Woman Pleads Not Guilty in Abortion Cases

Mrs. Edna E. Gray, 61, Negro, was wheeled on a stretcher into District Court yesterday to be arraigned before Justice Matthew F. McGuire on two indictments charging her with performing abortions.

She pleaded innocent to both indictments, and bond in each case was set at $3500.

Mrs. Gray is scheduled to go to trial on Monday on an earlier indictment charging her with performing an illegal operation on a 22-year-old Government worker last spring. Originally scheduled to go to trial in August, she pleaded illness, and the postponement was granted when three physicians reported it would be dangerous to her health to be put to trial at that time.

Mrs. Gray, who doctors stated yesterday was "feigning disability," was clad in a red chenille bathrobe and she held a hearing device in front of her mouth constantly.

The partly blind and deaf woman couldn't hear the clerk when he asked her how she wished to plead.

Her son was brought up to her to shout in the hearing device, "How you plead to indictment?"

"Not guilty," she replied.

Not satisfied with this, Justice McGuire asked the son to be more specific.

"You charged with abortions. How you plead?" the son shouted.

She repeated her answer.

Ousted Family Has Little Chance of New Home

Mrs. Naomi Green, Negro, and her eight children have been given 60 days to move out of a garage at 78 K st. ne., but even though the Navy will allot her at least $140 a month beginning next month, her chances to find another place to live in Washington are slim, it was learned yesterday.

Housing for Negro families seems not to be available in Washington at any cost, Mrs. Helen Duey Hoffman, executive secretary of the Washington Housing Agency, said yesterday.

When Mrs. Green's husband entered the Navy earlier this month, Mrs. Green was living in the garage because she said she could find no better place.

The Health Department, however, has said the garage is unfit for habitation, and the landlord-tenant court has ordered her to move within 60 days.

The passage of legislation now before Congress would give Mrs. Green an even larger monthly allotment with which to house, feed, and clothe her family—about $220 a month.

But, according to Doris B. Wilkins, social welfare consultant at landloard-tenant court, this would not help her find housing for her family.

Yesterday, the Washington War Housing Center had no listings of family accommodations of any kind for Negroes.

John Ihlder, National Capital Housing Authority chairman, said only a few of these units are still vacant, and they will be all full in a few weeks. As regards Mrs. Green's case, however, he said that a National Housing Authority rule says wives of service men have no rights as inmigrants.

Meanwhile, it was announced yesterday, that members of a Senate housing subcommittee will be conducted on a tour of low-rent housing properties of the National Capital Housing Authority tomorrow at 10 a. m., accompanied by Mr. Ihlder.

Senator Burton (Republican) of Ohio, chairman of the subcommittee and Senator Capper (Republican) of Kansas, who have made three earlier trips about Washington's slum areas, will join the tour, which will leave from Burton's office on Capitol Hill.

Properties to be inspected include the Fort Dupont dwellings, Ridge and Anacostia rds. se.; Ellen Wilson dwellings, 6th and 7th sts. se.; Frederick Douglas dwellings, Alabama ave. at 21st st. se.; Carrollsburg dwellings, I, M, 3d and 5th sts. se.; Kelly Miller dwellings, 2d, 4th, W sts. and Oakdale pl. nw.; Langston houses, at Benning rd. and 21st st. ne.; James Creek dwellings, 1st and M sts. sw., and Barry Farm dwellings, Summer and Wade rds., se. A project now under construction, the Parkside dwellings at Kenilworth ave. and Barnes lane ne., also is on the schedule.

Sidewalk Jammed By Ticket Buyers

Pedestrian traffic in Post Square went at a slower pace yesterday as several thousand Washingtonians stood in block-long lines to buy tickets for two special performances of "Oklahoma" at the National Theater.

There were 3240 tickets for the Thursday matinee and Sunday evening performances of the musical, and, between 9:30 a. m. and noon, all had been sold. But the double lines continued to stretch all afternoon, and National telephone lines continued to be swamped with calls.

Riebel Credits Job to Rocking Chair Fleet

of August 23 and what steps had been taken to start prosecutions of those who incited Johnsville guards, also members of the Coast Guard Reserve (Temporary), to defy orders of their officers.

There were indications, however, that the Justice Department, who had an observer present at the request of the committee, might institute prosecutions directed not only at union officials. Testimony already has been brought out to show that a purchasing officer at Brewster had been paying 10 to 15 per cent more than necessary for materials for Navy planes.

Is Taken to Task

Hebert took Riebel to task for his attempt to lay all the blame for the Brewster situation on the union.

"The Navy also takes the attitude that it is not to blame," Hebert said, "but in my opinion the fault rests with the whole triumvirate, management, labor and the Navy."

During the course of the day-long hearing Riebel, a huge 62-year-old industrialist with a voice like a bass drum, constantly cautioned the committee:

Disclaims Showmanship

"Don't think I'm smart or putting on a show or making a speech," but he kept a packed committee room rocking with laughter, nevertheless.

He described his initial relationship with De Lorenzo thus:

"I got in bed with Tom De Lorenzo, with the cover tucked right up under my chin—I guess we were sort of bundling together."

Then he went on to describe his growing difficulties with the union, which resulted in his resignation being requested by Henry Kaiser and remarked:

"Well, I just found out that every time I got into bed with Tom De Lorenzo I got out with less than I went in with."

Riebel told about a manpower utilization study made at Brewster by Mrs. Anna Rosenberg regional director of the War Manpower Commission in New York State, a study reputed to place most of the Brewster troubles at the door of management, and made at the request of the Naval Affairs Committee.

Describes August Strike

Striding up and down, giving testimony ranging from a shout to a throbbing whisper, Riebel told the committee about the August strike at Brewster's Johnsville plant, describing it as the most "God-awful thing I ever saw."

He told of men and women workers rushing up to him, grabbing him by the coat lapel, "thousands of them, I tell you, gentlemen, thousands of them," and pleading that they didn't want to go out, and couldn't be stop the strike.

The Wagner Act prevented him from addressing the workers, he said, although he was confident he could have persuaded at least 85 per cent to go back. He said, Monday's Supreme Court decision regarding the rights of an employer to speak to his men under the Wagner Act might have prevented the strike had it been handed down earlier.

He told of the long negotiations over a new union contract, after denouncing the old one as "hellish," and quoted De Lorenzo's comments during the negotiating.

De Lorenzo Quoted

The De Lorenzo quotation from stenotype notes in the records given the committee by Riebel was:

"I don't want to win the war at any cost. I don't want to wind up with a dictator, whether his name is Roosevelt or any other. We have Brewster soldiers abroad. They want to return to a democratic form of government. Some of us object to winning the war at any cost to America or to the American people, just so long as Russia comes out on top."

It is on this point that the union, when it has an opportunity to present its case, is said to have some sensational testimony to offer. Paul Krebs, secretary of Local 365 UAW-CIO, the union of which De Lorenzo is president, told The Post last night that if the union has an opportunity to present its case as fully as Navy and management officials, he is confident that the committee will discover that it will not be possible to ascribe all Brewster's troubles to the union or its contract.

Calls Kaiser Close Friend

Riebel referred constantly to Kaiser, who asked fo his resignation, as a very close friend. He indicated to the committee that he supposed De Lorenzo and Harry Morton, labor relations adviser to Kaiser, had suggested getting rid of him.

Asked by Representative Harris (Democrat) of Virginia if Kaiser would have to keep on placating the union to keep production going, Riebel put his hands to his head and said:

"Oh, I've dreaded that question more than any the committee could ask. I wish you wouldn't ask me that. It's a matter of embarrassment to a dear, dear friend of mine."

Good Enough Answer

Representative Maas (Republican) of Minnesota cut in drily:

"It seems to me you have answered it all right."

Riebel added that he said "a little prayer every night for Kaiser's success at Brewster, because I have that kind of hope for it. I ceased being president after October 7 and the future is none of my business."

Henry Kaiser, described by Rear Admiral S. M. Kraus and Lieut. J. J. Reynolds, as having already caused a tremendous change at Brewster, will appear before the committee today.

Nazis Pull Out of Crimea

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

RUSH TO STEM SOVIET DRIVE—German armies (open arrows) in the Crimea were reported evacuating the Crimea over the Perekop land bridge yesterday and were rushing reinforcements in an effort to stem the onrushing Russians. Soviet forces (solid arrows) raced south toward Krivoi Rog, steel center, threatening to trap the Germans in the Dnieper bend, and also continued to clean up last-ditch defenders of Melitopol man reinforcements from those new bases.

Stockholm dispatches, quoting Berlin spokesmen, said the Russian drive across the Dnieper loop toward the Black Sea was the greatest show of Russian strength of the war. The German spokesmen also were quoted as saying the Germans still were withdrawing in an effort to avoid being caught in a Soviet noose.

This indicated that German positions at Dnepropetrovsk and elsehere along the Dnieper bend were being abandoned because they no longer were tenable.

The reported German "evacuation" of the Crimea was partly true, Red Star said, but the Soviet army newspaper added that the German divisions leaving that imperilled peninsula were being thrown into the fighting at Melitopol, where the Russian communique said Rumanian and German forces were suffering heavy losses in men and equipment.

Nazi Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels admitted "temporary weaknesses in our position," in his weekly article in Das Reich, and said "we must satisfy ourselves with defensive successes."

"Every big war is finally decided mainly by staying power—the steadfastness of a warring nation," he added.

The Soviet bulletin said Russian forces knocked out 22 German tanks and shot down 80 planes on all fronts during Wednesday.

Action at Leningrad Seen

Stockholm, Oct. 21 (AP).—German military experts are predicting that the next big Russian offensive will strike the Leningrad sector, Swedish correspondents reported from Berlin today.

Coastal guns which the Germans moved from Sevastopol to the Leningrad sector last winter have been shelling the city in an effort to disrupt an offensive.

Italy Fight Lags; New Landing Seen

shipping has been "unusually lively" since the beginning of October, Berlin said.

Fighting 2400 feet above sea level along Italy's mountainous backbone, Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's Eight Army captured the villages of Busso, about 4 miles west of Campobasso, and Oratino, a few miles to the north. Storming of the high ground west of Campobasso against strong Nazi resistance was essential for the movement of Montgomery's forces along an important road toward the highway and rail junction of Isernia.

From Isernia a lateral road leads southwest to Venafro, and any push along this road by the Eighth Army would threaten to flank the inland anchor of the Nazis' new defense line.

Apparently encouraged by his troops' successful delaying action, Field Marshal Albert Kesselring, the German commander, has brought fresh forces into the fray and is offering greater resistance along the line, particularly on the Eighth Army front.

Unlike the Tunisian campaign, there is little chance of trapping a large force of Nazi troops with a sudden, overwhelming smash. The enemy has plenty of room over which to retreat, and his engineers already have prepared extensive demolitions and mine fields far behind his present lines.

Allied Airmen Active

The brightest spot in the Allied picture was the unceasing activity of the powerful American and British air forces. Besides a smash by American medium bombers and Lightning fighters deep into the Balkans, heavy and sustained air attacks were made on Nazi airdromes and communications in central and northern Italy above Rome. Warhawk fighters blew up a German ammunition train west of Ancona. "There was just no evidence of anything left in the vicinity," said Capt. Arthur Exon of Esterville, Iowa, leader of the Warhawks.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, touring the forward areas of the front with General Clark, expressed horror at the ruthlessness with which the retreating Nazis are dealing with the Italian civilian population.

to 7 a. m. Their bombs caused minor damage and casualties.

Today's communique also contained a delayed report of an enemy raid in the same sector Monday by six escorted bombers. Airacobras intercepted, shooting down four bombers and a fighter and probably destroying the other two bombers. One Airacobra was shot down but the pilot was saved.

To the northwest, Thunderbolts shot down six enemy float planes taking off at Wewak.

In the Solomons, eight Japanese fighter planes were downed in a new American raid against the Kahili airdrome on Bougainville. One raider was lost.

Barges Are Wrecked

Across Dampier Strait from Finschhafen, a Liberator bombed and wrecked 17 enemy supply barges at Borgen Bay, New Britain.

Unea Island, in the Bismarck Sea, north of New Britain, was bombed by this same patroling Liberator which was set upon by 22 enemy fighters during two running fights. The Liberator shot down three for certain, probably downed two others and damaged an additional three.

The Gasmata Airdrome, another New Britain base near the New Guinea jungle front, was raided by Allied attack planes.

Off Dutch New Guinea, Liberators sank a 4500-ton freighter-transport.

Attack on Gilberts

Pearl Harbor, Oct. 21 (AP).—Tarawa, major Japanese base in the Gilbert Islands, was attacked again on October 19 "by a small force" of Navy Liberator bombers, the Navy announced here today.

The announcement said "our forces suffered no damage," and that no enemy aircraft were sighted during the raid.

Tarawa, some 2500 miles southwest of Hawaii, was one of the places attacked by the carrier task force and land-based Army and Navy bombers which raided the Gilberts last September 17 and 18. (The Tokyo radio said early today that six American Liberators had attacked in the Gilbert Islands yesterday. The broadcast minimized damage done by the raiders.)

credentials to Mr. (Michael) Kalinin, chairman of the presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the USSR."

Col. Gen. Filip I. Golikof, a high Red Army general, represented Russia at the first conference yesterday in which the military men participated. He headed a Soviet military mission to the United States in 1941.

"These discussions," said the British spokesman, "have been very frank and full."

Eden was reported as pleased over the progress to date. The reaction of Hull was not learned immediately, in keeping with American policy to divulge nothing until the sessions end.

Nor was the Soviet attitude disclosed, but to judge by all the usual signs there was no doubt about the friendliness of the whole atmosphere in Moscow today. Hardly at any time in the history of the Soviet Union have relations been so cordial with the United States and Britain.

Moscow newspapers continued to highlight the news of the conference, and one Russian military commentator, Col. Nikolai Akimov, again touched on the subject of an Allied "second front" in Europe.

"The Red Army's recent successes," he said, "have made the situation more favorable than ever for an invasion of Europe by British and American troops.

Present Time to Strike

"The strategic leadership of the armed forces of the United Nations must take advantage of the present situation and strike while the iron is hot."

Asked if Secretary Eden was not being "too optimistic" about the proceedings and their outcome, the British spokesman said:

"Up to this point I would say no."

The spokesman had said yesterday that the conference was not solely to lay the groundwork for a future meeting of President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Joseph Stalin. He explained today that he did not mean that that was not being done.

With the sessions now getting down to routine, Hull's and Eden's days are about the same. They hold business meetings with their advisers and staffs in the morning until lunch, then go to meetings with Molotov in the afternoon. Following these three-way talks Hull and Eden again meet their staffs and discuss what took place.

The impression prevailed that a good many subjects would be gone over thoroughly by the three foreign ministers, with any tentative agreements reached to be referred back to the legislative bodies of the United States and Britain.

Longer Sessions Likely

As the three ministers go deeper into issues, the sessions are likely to become longer. Hull has no objection to this, but he does like to get home, according to his custom, for early retirement.

The Russians, who are showing every consideration to their 72-year-old guest, probably will alter their routine of working late at night and stick to long afternoon conferences. In that case it is believed the conference will last longer than the original estimate of two weeks, and Hull and Eden may be here on the occasion of the Soviets' great holiday November 7.

More social functions by the Russians for their guests also are predicted. Foreign Commissar Molotov's luncheon yesterday, preceding the afternoon conference, was attended by Marshal Klementi Voroshilov and A. I. Mikoyan, trade commissar, both of whom are members of the Politburo, and Vice Commissars Andrei J. Vishinsky, S. A. Lozovsky, and Alexander E. Korneichuk.

seventh yesterday against Dueren in Germany and Gilze-Rijen in Holland, kept the average of Britain-based bomber activity well up with the best previous pace, despite a spell of bad weather.

The German air force went through feeble measures of retaliation over England, but in contrast to the many hundreds of big bombers that invaded Germany, sneaked in a force of about only 30, with 12 of them reaching London to give the capital its fifth alert in five nights. Random bombs were dropped and 17 persons were killed.

Again tonight, London sounded the sixth successive night raid alert, but there was no immediate results of the attack.

urged its modification, contending it is unworkable and impractical.

"In the light of increases in the cost of living since September, 1942, we urged that greater leeway be given the War Labor Board. So far as I have been able to observe, no progress has been made in rolling back prices."

Prosecution Promised

Murray said that the President promised that the "program to push back prices would be prosecuted."

A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, told reporters that "we kicked the Little Steel formula around."

No Rail Wage Commitments

He acknowledged that the President made no commitments on railroad wages, but added that he had not changed his mind about accepting the 4 cents an hour boost recommended for operation railroad workers by an emergency panel.

"I could not recommend acceptance of the increase in good conscience," he said.

The White House conference was attended by the members of the combined Labor War Board—including Green, Murray, Whitney, Daniel J. Tobin of the AFL Teamsters, George Meany, AFL secretary treasurer; R. J. Thomas of the CIO Automobile Workers and Julius Emspak of the CIO Electrical Workers. Mrs. Anna M. Rosenberg, regional War Manpower Director for New York who acts as secretary for the group, also attended.

De Marigny Placed Near Death Scene

hairs which investigators told of finding on De Marigny's' hands and arms after the slaying. The prosecution has contended that anyone in the room at the time of the attack would have singed hairs.

De Marigny stood, his arms resting atop the cage, while Higgs asked Mrs. Clark whether he had exhibited and lighted hurricane lamps during the dinner party. Yes, she replied.

"Did you hear the accused complain of a burned hand when lighting one of them?" Higgs asked.

"Yes."

De Marigny was in high spirits, Mrs. Clark said. She identified a tan linen sports jacket, brown trousers and white shoes as part of the outfit he wore. The prosecution has testimony that the defendant could not produce the shirt he told of wearing.

Higgs brought out that De Marigny wore no raincoat or hat on the drive to the women's home.

Visited Police Station

Under Higgs' questioning, Mrs. Clark said she had been summoned to Westbourne during the investigation July 9, and there had seen De Marigny taken upstairs between 11 a. m. and noon "by an American detective." She did not indicate whether the detective was E. W. Melchen or whether he was James O. Barker, Miami police captains called in on the case by the Duke of Windsor, Governor of the Bahamas.

Prosecution witnesses have testified that a fingerprint found on a screen in the death room was an impression of De Marigny's little right finger, and the crown has attempted to show that he could not have touched the screen after the crime was discovered.

It was Constable Wendell Parker who told of a visit by De Marigny to the police station about 7:30 a. m. July 8.

"I was struck by his appearance," the tall, uniformed witness related. "He seemed excited and mad. His eyes appeared wild, and his lips protruded."

Parker said De Marigny appeared at the station to inquire whether he should bring in his truck for inspection.

Blisters Described

Sir Oscar asked the witness:

"Did the accused ever visit you at that hour before?"

"Neither the accused—nor anyone else," Parker replied

Fitzmaurice also had testified that Sir Harry apparently still was alive when his body was set afire by the attacker who struck four blows to the head as the 68-year-old baronet lay in his bed.

He told of finding burn blisters on the body.

Asked whether post-mortem blisters are possible, Fitzmaurice replied: "not according to any textbook I have seen."

Preston Delano Stays

The Senate confirmed yesterday the reappointment of Preston Delano of Massachusetts as comptroller of the currency.

Sir Dudley Pound Dies at 66; Was Former First Sea Lord

Noted British Sailor Resigned Recently Because of Health

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 21.—Admiral of the Fleet Sir Dudley Pound, who resigned early this month as First Sea Lord because of ill health, died today in London at the age of 66.

Sir Dudley directed the British fleet through four of its most critical war years and is credited with shaping more than any other man the course of Britain's modern naval policy.

He was taken ill while returning from the Churchill-Roosevelt conference at Quebec. He resigned as First Sea Lord October 4 and was succeeded the next day by Admiral Sir Andrew Browne Cunningham, who had been commander of the British Mediterranean Fleet.

Sir Dudley was close to Prime Minister Churchill.

In his younger days he was on duty as commander of the H. M. S. Colossus in the Battle of Jutland. He was in command of the Mediterranean Fleet in 1935 when war with Italy loomed over the Ethiopian situation.

Like Churchill, Sir Dudley was half American. His mother was Miss Elizabeth Pickman Rogers of Boston, who married Alfred John Pound, English lawyer.

Born August 29, 1877, he became a naval cadet in 1891.

On two separate occasions his personal bravery brought him commendation. Once he descended into a gas-filled hold to attempt the rescue of three men who died from suffocation. Again, he rescued a stoker from drowning, diving overboard fully clothed off British Columbia.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

SIR DUDLEY POUND.

In the Battle of Jutland he was mentioned in dispatches for the daring with which he maneuvered his ship under heavy fire.

In 1933 he was created a knight.

Sir Dudley could almost be called a charter member of the school of naval preparedness. Even in 1933 he was hammering away for more battleships for the Royal Navy.

"There is going to be a hell of a fight in the next two or three years," he declared bluntly then.

Army Outlays Are Defended

to repair engines in Russia were required, with the Government to furnish hospitalization, medical care and other necessities. The Navy, he said, advised the contractors that employes wearing glasses should take more than one pair abroad, and those having dentures "should have at least one spare set."

So the company furnished the extra false teeth, he explained, and the action "seems to me to have been decent under the circumstances and the terms of the contract."

Patterson added that the employe actually lost his teeth in Russia "and had to use the spare set."

A $1.39 item for dog transportation, he said, was involved in a case where the Accounting Office recognized that the expenses of transporting the family and its effects were proper but refused to pay for the dog's fare.

Patterson said he held "no brief for the dog" but doubted that item justified "a charge of incompetence and inefficiency."

The committee went ahead, meanwhile, with testimony of aviation industry spokesmen and heard Webb Wilson, representing the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce, testify that the average aircraft company has tied up so much of its capital in inventories, taxes and working capital that it would not have "a fighting chance to survive" unless it could convert its investments into cash within a few weeks after contracts are terminated to ask for additional workers and more trucks for the District Dog Pound, at the same time he proposes a strict dog quarantine here.

His proposal will prohibit dog owners from permitting their animals to roam the streets whether licensed or not, he asserted.

"The poundmaster," said Dr. Ruhland, "has not sufficient personnel nor trucks to carry out city-wide program of rounding up stray dogs. It will be necessary to enlarge his force to make a campaign of this kind effective."

Frank B. Marks, the poundmaster, said he has only one truck and two experienced dog catchers available for "street patrol." Only eight men including himself comprise the Pound force, he said.

He announced late yesterday that his men had captured three dogs in Snow's ct. nw., an alley adjacent to the 900 block 22th st. nw., the place where the mad dog was caught Tuesday.

Three other "biting" dogs were picked up, he declared, in the area the mad dog is known to have traveled. Two of them were put to death immediately and their heads sent to the Health Department for examination.

Muzzling of all dogs in the city can be ordered by the Commissioners by proclamation, Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech asserted yesterday. Dr. Ruhland said, however, animal experts are of the opinion muzzling is ineffective in rendering a rabid dog harmless.

Because of this, he said, he intends to propose the rigid restriction on all stray dogs. The virtual quarantine will make it unlawful for any dog to be on the street unless on a leash held by an adult.

Mrs. Ford said last night there was no evidence that the mongrel which bit her Mexican hairless was mad.

"Our dog, Crickett," she said, "gave no sign of being rabid either until after she had bitten Mr. Ford and me several times while we played with her. We learned she was rabid, Monday, and the veterinary recommended she be killed."

Dog quarantines already are in effect in nearby Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties.

Metropolitan, E. K. Morris: $14,644.21, 743 pledges, 5 per cent of its goal after the first day of house-to-house solicitation.

Reports From Counties

County reports listed on the progress chart, which is being kept at the Hall of Flags were $3590 for 6 per cent of the Montgomery County quota and $2102.50 for 6 per cent of the Prince Georges County goal. Fairfax County, which has raised about $14,000 of its $31,500 quota, will have its formal report meeting today at 8 p. m. in the courthouse. Arlington County, with a $48,500 quota, held a session last night.

Symbols of the three fronts for which Washington fund workers are seeking $4,800,000, a serviceman, a Greek refugee and the 5-year-old daughter of a war worker and soldier were special guests at the report meeting yesterday.

Representing Washington's home front needs was young Beverly Anderson, who finds recreation and daytime care at the Barney Neighborhood House while her mother earns her support at a Government job. Beverly's two sisters and brother are also Barney enrollees. The community house is one of 145 local agencies supported by dollars given to the fund.

Community fund interest in the USO and other war hospitality was symbolized in Sergt. Rodney Piper, a marine since 1940, who contracted malaria at Guadalcanal and is now receiving treatments here.

Calling for fund support for the service clubs which mean so much to the boys in uniform, Piper asserted. "If you keep up your part, I'm sure the guys over there will keep up theirs. Their batting average is good—how's yours?"

George Grimbilas, 25, a student at Georgetown University who was attending Athens University in Greece at the time of the German occupation of his country, spoke for the third front which the fund supports—United Nations Relief.

Grimbilas, who parents still reside in Athens although he managed to leave five months ago, said, "the Community War Fund has been playing an excellent part in all the generous work that America is doing for Greece. We must in every way help the fund in order to continue the existence of the nation."

Compromise Policy Draft Reported, 20-2

cessful B-2 H-2 amendment: "If Senator Connally (a strong internationalist), and Senator Nye (as strongly isolationist) both can support it, you know it's a milk and water thing.'"

Chairman Connally, whose name the resolution bears, quickly hopped to its defense.

Said Connally "The resolution comes more nearly expressing the crystalized opinion of the Senate and the country than any resolution which has reached the committee . . . I feel sure that it will meet with favorable reactions among all Allied nations particularly and among all democratic and free peoples who believe in international peace."

Text of Resolution

The resolution resolves:

"That the war against all our enemies be waged until complete victory is achieved.

"That the United States cooperate with its comrades-in-arms in securing a just and honorable peace.

"That the United States, acting through its constitutional processes, join with free and sovereign nations in the establishment and maintenance of international authority with power to prevent aggression and to preserve the peace of the world."

Doesn't Meet Demands

It did not meet the demands for "specifies" urged by the bipartisan group led by Ball of Minnesota and Burton of Ohio (Republicans), and Hatch of New Mexico and Hill of Alabama (Democrats).

Senator Pepper offered their revised amendment, in committee. This would pick up the first two clauses of the Connally resolution, and resolve further:

"That the United States, acting through its constitutional processes, join with the United Nations and such free and sovereign nations as may be duly admitted, in the establishment and maintenance of an international organization to promote cooperation among nations, with authority to settle international disputes peacefully and with power including military force, to suppress military aggression and to preserve the peace of the world."

The five committeemen voting for the Pepper amendment were Pepper, Wagner of New York, Murray of Montana, Green of Rhode Island, and Guffey of Pennsylvania (all Democrats). Nine Democrats and seven Republicans voting against it were Senators Connally, George of Georgia, Thomas of Utah, Van Nuys of Indiana, Barkley of Kentucky, Gillette of Iowa, Clark of Missouri, Glass of Virginia, Tunnell of Delaware (Democrats), and Johnson of California, Capper of Kansas, Vandenberg of Michigan, White of Maine, Shipstead, Nye, and Davis of Pennsylvania (Repu' licans).

Senator Wagner Tries

After Pepper failed, Senator Wagner attempted to amend the resolution to arm the international authority with power "to prevent and suppress aggression (and) to foster the peaceful settlement of disputes." Wagner's amendment picked up another vote, that of Senator Shipstead (Republican) of Minnesota, but nonetheless was defeated, 15 to 6.

The final vote came on approval of the Connally resolution, and on this count the five Senators who had supported the Pepper amendment swung over to the resolution. Only on this ballot was Senator LaFollette's proxy cast alongside of Johnson's, against any resolution. No votes were cast by Senator Reynolds (Democrat) of North Carolina. Senators supporting the resolution on the last call were divided: Democrats, 13; Republicans, 6.

Senator Connally predicted the resolution would pass the Senate after four or five days of debate, but Senator Hatch, after conferring with other members of the B-2 H-2 group, told newsmen debate "will be full enough for the Senate to make some strengthening changes."

SPARS

The name SPAR is compounded from the first letters of the Coast Guard motto, "Semper Paratus," and its English translation, "Always Ready." The SPARS prefer this short and salty, though unofficial, name.

These girls in navy blue are doing a valiant job at shore bases by freeing Coast Guardsmen for fighting sea duty. In war and peace the Coast Guard does more than guard our coasts. It is the nation's marine police force with varied and often hazardous duties. Despite the war's ever-increasing demand for trained personnel for combat duty, peacetime functions of the Coast Guard continue and some even increase in scope.

The girls who proudly wear the Coast Guard shield are helping thousands of Coast Guardsmen to join their shipmates on the battlefronts. By filling the jobs of men who go to sea the SPARS are speeding victory and quickening the return of all our men.

Where Unity Is Needed

In view of the heavy fog of conflicting propagandist statements and the scantiness of authentic data regarding the rival claims of the followers of Gen. Draja Mihailovich and those of Gen. Josip (Tito) Broz and his Partisans, it is difficult to know where the truth lies. But one thing is certainly clear. Neither the interests of Yugoslavia nor the cause of the United Nations are advanced by this internecine struggle. Only the Nazis are helped by it. For that reason the indication from Cairo that General Mihailovich is anxious to achieve unity with the Partisans so as to intensify the "common struggle against the hated conqueror" is distinctly to be welcomed.

Certainly the Yugoslav situation should be on the agenda of the tripartite conference in Moscow. As Field Marshal Smuts, Prime Minister of the Union of South Africa, suggested recently, an Allied invasion of the Balkans may occur before the end of this year. And even if there is no invasion that early, we now are in control of Italian areas very close to Yugoslavia, so that an increasing volume of military materiel can be shipped to the forces in that country that are fighting the Nazis. In view of the cooperative spirit now existing between Russia, Britain and America in the Mediterranean theater, a pooling of their influence to end the internal conflict in Yugoslavia would seem to be very much in order. It would be to the distinct advantage of all concerned.

High Costs

Low costs and prices and big turnover used to be the pride and glory of American business and the sign of the efficiency of its operations. On these two pillars our home and foreign markets throve and our people prospered. Are we not in danger of losing that advantage? The question is exposed by the searchlight which Comptroller General Warren has directed at the padded cost structures of our war business. These show a startling decline in our vaunted efficiency as well as in our standards of doing business. The problem must be causing our manufacturers a good deal of heart-searching. Indeed, we have heard it said that some firms are now refusing to consider cost-plus war contracts out of fear that the inefficiency of doing war business will carry forward into peace business. That would be a grave handicap when our economy is returned to a competitive situation.

It may be wondered why our businessmen are acquiescing in a wastefulness in filling war contracts which might be impossible to dislodge. The reason is that the temptation has been made irresistible. The war procurement program began as a demand for war materials at any price. American firms had had little experience in this new business upon which to gauge prices. What business had been done was done at inflated levels, as in filling the Anglo-French orders before America entered the war. It was at these high prices that this country turned itself into the arsenal of democracy. To be sure, some American businessmen voluntarily cut prices and even returned profits as they accumulated experience. But there seems to have been no schematic effort on the part of the procurement agencies and businessmen acting together to reduce the high cost structure.

On the contrary, as the Comptroller General showed, the business aim has been to justify the high prices by padding costs. Our renegotiation, price and tax policies—not to mention our lax manpower policy—have encouraged this process. Under renegotiation only the over-all profits seem to be used as a yardstick. No reward is given to the firm which can produce goods cheaply. On the contrary, if it swells its profits by efficient operation, it will find the Government renegotiators ready to siphon them into the War and Navy Departments' coffers. Nor have our price controls been helpful in forcing back the price trend. Aside from the fact that the War and Navy Departments have always looked askance at OPA's efforts to press down the price of war materials, price control has been merely an abortive attempt at freezing successive states of inflation. Tax policy, finally, has been an ally of waste in business operations by compensating the contractor who can resist price reductions in the relief provisions for refunds and carrybacks.

Thus the high price structure which is now the condition of American business is likely to be a boomerang. In addition to robbing the taxpayer, inviting inflation, and hampering production, it is making for postwar trouble. Comptroller General Warren's testimony should be a stop, look and listen sign. Bernard M. Baruch long ago warned the country of the peril of doing war business at high prices. In this as in other matters we have refused to heed his advice. Germany knew better. On November 15, 1938, the Berlin government, anxious not only to produce the maximum goods for war but to maintain efficiency of production for postwar markets, based its tax laws on incentives for efficiency. It is not too late for this country to do the same all the way down the line in taxation, renegotiation, contract termination, and maybe in privileges and priorities of reconversion.

Air Record

Rocking chair pilots will no doubt argue about the relative merits of various types of planes until doomsday is heralded. But in the air they pay off on results. The results of our aerial warfare from Pearl Harbor to September 1 of this year have now been compiled and announced by the Office of War Information. They afford a reasonable basis for pride and satisfaction on the part of all Americans—particularly the Americans who designed and built our planes and those who flew them from flying fields and carrier decks into the toughest opposition the enemy could offer. For every ship lost by our Army or Navy air forces, we have downed or otherwise destroyed about four enemy ships. That constitutes a pretty high and obvious measure of combat superiority.

Yet it by no means tells the whole story. The point to remember about the American flying services is that they have been persistently in action and on the offensive almost from the very first moment of the war. In Europe, in the Mediterranean and in the Pacific, they have been carrying the fight to the enemy, carrying it—in the case of Germany, at least—to the very heart of the enemy's own territory. Army bombers have dropped well over 100,000 tons of bombs on enemy targets. Navy torpedo and dive bombers have decimated the Japanese fleet. This destruction of the sources of enemy strength has been the primary business of American aviation. The whittling away of enemy air power has been accomplished, in the main, while these offensive missions were being executed.

The achievements of American fliers are at last receiving the recognition they deserve, in the Army, at least. In a recent revision of a field service manual the War Department observed that "land power and air power are coequal and interdependent forces: neither is an auxiliary of the other." Just such a position of parity for airmen is needed to give them the freedom they require for the swift and effective development of their weapons and tactics. They are now assured that they can operate in full collaboration with, instead of in subordination to, the forces on the ground. The Navy, as we have time after time suggested, might well emulate the Army's progressive policy on this score.

Instead, the Navy persistently underrates the performance of aviation, particularly its own. At Midway, for instance, the communiques were shockingly meager and impersonal about the achievements of Naval airmen. Since the part played by air could not be minimized, the Army part was played up. We have had occasion in the past to note the slur on Navy aviation elsewhere in the surface men's pursuance of battleship propaganda. Even as late as Salerno the Navy Department continued to be squint-eyed in mind. No American would diminish by one iota what the surface ships did in that engagement in support of the ground forces. At the same time the determining role which air power may play in a combined operation and the prime value of flexible air force organization was classically illustrated in the air effort supporting the Allied invasion of Italy.

However heartening the OWI's report on the performance of our aircraft, we have no title at this stage of the conflict to complacency. "This report," the OWI admitted, "is being written at a moment when it has become apparent that the production goals set for the aircraft industry for 1943 are not going to be met." The goals were very high, indeed; we were scheduled by the end of this year to be turning out 10,000 planes a month. In terms of the job to be done this is by no means too lofty an aim. We have demonstrated our qualitative superiority in the air. Quantitatively, our strength must become so overwhelming that it can batter the enemy into surrender. The men who design and build our planes must continue indefatigably to exert the utmost energy and ingenuity to keep American aviation on top. That can be done only by combining full steam ahead in the factories with priority in building up plane crews.

Another Stalingrad?

Any idea that the Germans have been carrying out a strategic retreat in the Ukraine must now be cast aside as without validity. Undoubtedly it was the intention of the Wehrmacht to cling to the Dnieper line after they began to be driven back from their strong points in the Donets. And they have certainly been making a valiant effort to prevent a major Russian breakthrough in the region between Kiev and the Sea of Azov—as, to cite but one instance, the bitter fighting in the streets of Melitopol clearly indicates. Red Star, the Russian Army's newspaper, was not exaggerating when it recently described the Dnieper battle as being "one of the fiercest, most difficult and greatest" of the entire war.

The indications are now multiplying that the battle, so far as the Germans are concerned, is a losing one. The breach in the enemy lines southwest of Kremenchug which the Red army succeeded in making some time ago has now been broadened and widened into a salient which threatens to engulf the vital iron-ore mines of Krivoi Rog, now less than 30 miles away, and outflank the German forces in the Dnepropetrovsk region. It is hardly surprising, then, that a withdrawal from Dnepropetrovsk by the Nazis is now, Berlin admits, under way. The possibility can thus no longer be discounted that the entire Dneiper bend will be cleared of the enemy—a result which would mean the return of the Crimea into Russian hands.

In these circumstances it is not surprising that, despite their preoccupation with the Allied air offensive in the west, the developments on the Eastern Front are now occupying first place in the German mind. A disaster comparable to that of Stalingrad may be in the making for the Herrenvolk.

Legislative Sabotage

The Senate on Wednesday strangled to death the bill for Federal aid to education by the device of recommitting it to the Committee on Education and Labor. It was not even an open and honest act of strangulation by men willing to stand up and be counted. Instead it was accomplished deviously, from behind, by legislative trickery. The pious gentlemen involved did not care to leave any fingerprints. First they amended the bill to make it fit their accusations. Then they applied the garrote.

The bill, sponsored by Senators Thomas of Utah and Hill of Alabama, sought to appropriate 300 million dollars for grants-in-aid to the States, two-thirds of which would be used for the payment of teachers' salaries. The principal objection to the bill expressed in the course of Wednesday's debate was that it would impose Federal control upon local school systems. This despite the fact that the bill's first section explicitly forbade "any agency or officer of the United States to control the administration, curriculum, instruction, methods of instruction or materials of instruction." The safeguard incidentally, is one we applaud. But instead of endeavoring to improve or strengthen this section, opponents of the Federal aid measure chose to nullify it by supporting a needless and irrelevant amendment of Senator Langer's forbidding discrimination on account of race, creed or color in the administration of Federal funds or of "State funds supplemented thereby."

This amendment of Senator Langer's was denounced as sheer obfuscation by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. It was vehemently opposed by the American Teachers' Association, an organization including Negro teachers. It served no purpose save to make the bill as a whole intolerable. A number of Senators who voted for this amendment promptly turned round and voted to have the legislation as a whole recommitted to the Committee on Education and Labor. Senator Taft, who supported the amendment, rose as soon as it had been passed to make the motion for recommittal. As Senator George forcefully pointed out to his colleagues, "Every intelligent Negro in this country will definitely understand that Senators who voted for the amendment were voting against the Negro's interest, because they have killed the proposed legislation."

The fact is that they were voting against the interest of whites and Negroes alike. In the whole of this Union there are only three States or Territories which do not have teachers receiving less than $1,200 a year. More than half the States have teachers who are receiving less than $600 a year. Such stipends do not draw high caliber instructors to our public schools. They have been responsible for a wholesale abandonment of the teaching profession. During the 1942-43 school year, 112,000 teachers left our public schools. An additional 105,000 are expected to leave during the current year.

True enough, the causes of this situation are local. But the consequences are national. Inadequate education in any part of the country makes itself felt in national affairs, is reflected in the laws under which all of us must live. And it cannot be remedied locally. For the situation embraces a vicious circle. Inadequate education breeds poverty; and poverty makes adequate education impossible. If this is not a fit sphere for Federal aid, then we are no longer a union but a mere confederacy.

MERIDIAN HILL CONCERT

Tall harps repeat the upward rush of fountains,
Bubbles and foam tossed on a twilight pool.
The cello's song flows down the water stairway.
From the slim flute issues a reedy calling
Like thrush and veery waked from sleep to sing.
Night comes softly, hesitant, pausing to listen,
Cool on the listless trees, parting the lilies.
Stars appear singly.

Look—on the startled dark the electric
Beam of the War Light sweeps the horizon—
Another— another—
Transparent steel, sword blade on sword blade.
Now we remember why street lamps are hooded,
Why the heart, lonely, seeks refuge in music,
Why Time for our children is not as they planned it
But sharp edged, heroic, stark as this light
Cutting out darkness, probing our night.

Over-Optimism

By Mark Sullivan

Should Be Avoided

THE ATMOSPHERE at Washington about war prospects just now is created mainly by an unusual action of Army heads. This week, Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson and Chief of Staff Gen. George C. Marshall, talked to practically all the members of the House of Representatives in a secret meeting. They asked that what they said be kept in confidence. A summary of the spirit of what the Army heads said was expressed by one Congressman as having "debunked a lot of optimism." This is the present mood of Washington.

The request of the Army heads for secrecy has been heeded—the necessity for it is recognized by everybody. What is written here is based on a broad survey of known conditions, taking in factors other than military. This comes to the same answer— that over-optimism should be avoided. The reasons against optimism come down to a few conditions, which constitute, so to speak, bottlenecks impeding victory. Several other conditions are favorable.

In all the waters of Europe, and in the whole Atlantic Ocean, the only naval vessels—that is, surface vessels—on the side of the Axis are what remain of the Germany navy. The number of formidable German warships is very small, not over half a dozen. These, however, are very modern, fast, and heavily armed. Even one or two of them are capable of doing immense damage by forays. To keep them bottled up requires the constant vigilance of a considerable number of heavy British warships.

ONE OF the German warships, the Tirpitz, was put out of commission recently by a daring expedition of British "pocket submarines." If the few others should be put out of commission, there would not remain, in European or Atlantic waters, any surface Axis warship of any consequence. The same result would follow if Germany should surrender or be conquered. In such event, the entire naval strength of the Allies, in heavy ships, would be free to concentrate in the Pacific against Japan. This combined strength is enormous—the British Navy, the American Navy, the considerable remains of the French navy and the Italian navy.

What is said here about Axis naval weakness in the Atlantic applies to surface vessels. The German strength in submarines is formidable. But combating submarines does not require heavy Allied warships—submarines are combated mainly by small vessels. Also, the Allies might choose to retain in Europe some heavy warships for use in landing operations and the like. But the basic fact remains—that the only formidable surface naval strength of the Axis in European or Atlantic waters is very small; and that, with these put out of commission, the Allies would be able to concentrate against Japan a naval strength enormously preponderant.

OUR CHIEF handicap is, as from the beginning, logistics—distance and the impediments that go with distance. It is logistics that has prevented our setting up in Europe a second front of the size the Russians wish. The Russians, and Americans, who clamor for a second front, do not realize the difficulty of transporting an army of a million to three million men across 3000 miles of ocean, landing it on a hostile shore, and maintaining and supplying it. The difficulty would remain extreme, even if we should succeed in completely overcoming the German submarine. It is distance, and the impediments accompanying distance, that make it difficult for the Allies to give China the help she needs, either in the form of supplies or a military expedition such as is now contemplated. Not only is China far distant from America and Britain, access to China, whether by sea, or overland from India, is extremely difficult.

The handicap of logistics, like all our handicaps, is being reduced by time and success. Since the Allies have won control of the Mediterranean, it will be easier for them to use oil and gas from British sources in Asia and from Russian sources. This will overcome much of the handicap inherent in transporting oil from America to European waters and to the South Pacific.

Military men, in estimating the necessities for victory, and arriving at cautious discouragement of optimism, do not take into account enemy morale. They calculate on the basis of victory by battle. Anything that can be said about present German morale is necessarily vague, and likely to be colored by hope. But competent judges believe that disastrous crackup of the morale of the German people is a matter of time.

Volturno And Dnieper

By Paul Schubert

German Retreats

ODDLY ENOUGH, it was easier for us to understand the warfare of 1942, when things were not going well for us, than it is for us to comprehend the present situation.

In '42 the combat equation was a simple one. We were weak. The enemy was strong. Russians, British, Americans—all gave ground. We gave ground reluctantly, but we and our allies lost all of south Russia up to the suburbs of Stalingrad, we lost all of North Africa up to El Alamein . . . we lost the Philippines and Malaya and Burma and the East Indies.

That was all understandable. The enemy was primed for his offensive campaigns and we were caught in a large measure unready.

Whatever we lost in the way of terrain, we did not lose heart. We worked hard toward the idea of checking the enemy's offensive—and then turning it back.

Midway, Guadalcanal, El Alamein, Stalingrad were turning point actions, after which we seized the initiative, and have never relinquished it.

We could understand the 1942 situation because we were able to appraise, fairly accurately, the United Nations' weaknesses that made 1942 possible—and we had some idea of what could be done to overcome those weaknesses.

THE 1943 situation is harder to understand because four years of warfare have interposed such barriers between ourselves and the Germans that our public has no way of appraising German intangibles—or of estimating German strength or weakness. As for the Japanese, we have come to think of them as subhuman barbarians, so that the Pacific problem seems less like one of rational conflict than one in which we are faced by a difficult, distasteful but not impossible extermination job.

Leaving the Japanese out of it, our warfare against the Germans has recently focused, in its ground action, in simultaneous battles along the lines of two rivers, the Volturno and the Dnieper.

These were battles which might quite understandably have gone well for Germany. They were fought after periods of extended United Nations offensive activity which saw the Germans pushed back, week after week, in repeated loss calculated to stiffen German resistance. Our offensive used up United Nations strength. We haven't heard many details, but we do know that United States forces suffered very considerable damage to the material used in our conquest of Sicily. We can well believe that the Russians paid a great price in fuel, ammunition and transport for this summer's great offensive. As for the British, their Mediterranean forces have been on the advance, now, for just about 12 months.

There is a moment in every offensive when the time is ripe for counterattack.

Last year, in 1942, our side was able to take advantage of this moment, in Russia, in the Mediterranean and in the Pacific. At precisely the right time and place, we struck—and were greatly rewarded for striking.

THIS YEAR the moment appeared to come, as far as the Germans are concerned, when the fighting reached the Dnieper and the Volturno.

The Germans had had time to prepare these positions, to assemble supplies and mass manpower. They certainly had every inducement, from a military point of view. If they could stop us at the Volturno—if they could defeat our invasion of Italy, they would be doing the one thing that might upset the British-American invasion timetable, and doing it at a moment when the job is certainly easier than it will be after we have built up our strength on the Continent to really formidable numbers.

As for halting the Russians, that was almost a must, both from a military and from a psychological point of view.

The Germans appear to have taken steps calculated to stop us, both on the Volturno and on the Dnieper. Yet at both rivers they appear to have failed.

Why have they failed? This failure of theirs is, from our point of view, the year's most important development. It contains the seed of our future victory. It is our first real victory in the ground warfare against Germany.

The answer is probably not a simple one, but a complex of many answers. They have failed because they are inferior in the air. They have failed because we are fighting simultaneously on the Volturno and the Dnieper—they might have handled either of these situations, but not both. They have failed because of the threat of action to come at many other points.

But probably their decisive failure has been a thing of the spirit. We know the value of spirit in holding and turning back an offensive. At El Alamein, at Stalingrad, at Guadalcanal, turning point battles were won by men willing to die—to die for a future in which those men believed, even if they were not to share it. At the Dnieper and the Volturno, the Germans of 1943 appear to have lost this ultimate spiritual something that makes men unbeatable.

Democracy First

Vice President Wallace's speech at the Chicago rally of the United Nations Committee to Win Peace was a refreshing contrast to the resolution on domestic affairs adopted by the Republican Post War Policy Committee.

The Republicans clearly wanted to go back to the Hardling-Coolidge-Hoover policy of no effective government regulation of industry. They worshiped at the shrine of free enterprise, completely forgetting that enterprise was free from government regulation under Hoover and yet gave us the worst depression that the country has ever known.

Wallace, on the other hand, clearly recognized that we cannot merely go back to Hoover's policies if we are to achieve freedom from want. He realized that we must control monopolies and cartels more effectively than before. He showed conclusively that our own prosperity depends on helping others in other parts of the world to get a higher standard of living so that they can buy from us more of what we can produce.

As against the old America First Committee's idea of isolationism, which had been supported vigorously before Pearl Harbor by so many of the Republicans at Mackinac Island, he put forth the sound proposal of democracy first as a necessary means both of peace and of prosperity for ourselves and for other nations, too.

Milk Subsidy

Why should the Government balk at subsidizing so precious a commodity as milk, which surely is equal in importance to our defense plants? Why economize on milk now when the Government has been subsidizing other industries long before farmers were included?

Undoubtedly the farmer is one of our most patriotic citizens. Surely he gives the rest of us the benefit of the doubt—he goes ahead and raises the needed food. Have you ever heard of a group of farmers walking out in the middle of harvest because of the heat, long working hours, etc.?

If anything will cause the farmer to give up his dairy farming, it will probably be the more lucrative defense job, which is now well subsidized, either directly or indirectly.

Japanese Propaganda

Senator Tydings wants us to grant freedom to the Philippines now. We do not have the islands, but it is a good gesture to offset some Japanese propaganda. After Britain and America were thrown out of China, they renounced to China their extraterritorial rights, yet Churchill has indicated that Britain will reclaim Hongkong and perhaps other territories rightfully Chinese. Mme. Kai-shek has said, however, that China will control her own coast ports.

In a few days we will make the beau geste to China by repealing the Chinese Exclusion Act. This immigration exclusion legislation is similar to the act excluding the Japanese, which was the basis for the Jap hatred toward Americans and also the tinder that was sparked at Pearl Harbor.

All of this is supposedly good political strategy by which we hope to confuse Japanese propaganda which they are using to incite the Asiatics against Englishmen and Americans and to win the Filipinos, the Burmese, the Indians, and the Chinese over to a policy of Asia for Asiatics.

Gullible Public

I have been wondering about the phenominal Frank Sinatra. An ordinary boy with an ordinary voice that could be matched for quality and tone by hundreds of boys known to all of us. Why this great adulation? Now I believe I have discovered the "secret." It is all a carefully planned, well arranged advertiser's dream. He knew his public, the "sheeplike" quality of the masses and he used that knowledge to wise advantage. How do I know? I was running through some anecdotes of the "Great" this morning and came across a story of the great musician Liszt. I will quote from the book:

"So dependent on the adulation of his audience was Frank Liszt that he is said to have paid women 25 francs to faint at his concerts. The swoon was always timed to occur just before the climax of the most popular run. Liszt would leap from his piano stool, pick up the swooner and leave the rest of the audience impressed by his brilliance and dismayed by their own stolidity. Once, however, the hired fainter forgot to faint, Liszt's fingers flew up the keys—but he could not finish the run. So he fainted himself."

How about it, Frank? L. G. W.

Esthetic Values

May I congratulate The Post upon publishing in the issue of October 16 a letter by Otto Terney Simons entitled "Johannes Brahms"? In these busy days of controversial issues the fact that The Post will give space to a matter of esthetic value only is very comforting.

It makes one feel that perhaps some day we may be able to take time out from tearing one another to pieces and devote more of our time and energies to the contemplation of the lives of some of the contributors to the progress of the human race rather than to the lives of its devastators.

More time for Brahms and his gentle and beautiful "Cradle Song," for me the loveliest lullaby of them all, would be profitable for all parties concerned.

Waiter—Yes, but no cream.

Customer—Let me look over the menu and see what else I can't get.

Waiter—The things you can't get are in the larger type, sir.

Customer—What are these things in the smaller type?

Waiter—They're the doubtful ones.

Customer—What do you mean, "doubtful?"

Waiter—I'm doubtful whether we have them either.

* * * *

Customer—I think I'll start with mock turtle soup.

Waiter—Sorry, but it's out. Our chef caught a mock yesterday, but he hasn't been able to snare a turtle.

Customer—How about noodle soup?

Waiter—Soup with no noodles is the best I can do for you today. It's a NOODLELESS TUESDAY.

* * * *

Customer—Any chance of a steak?

Waiter—Eggplant or halibut steak?

Customer—Now, don't spring that eggplant steak one on me. I'm sick of that gag. I just heard of the most popular restaurant in town.

Waiter—What makes it popular?

Customer—The proprietor has stuck a big sign in the window, "THIS PLACE SERVES NOTHING CALLED AN EGGPLANT STEAK.

Waiter—That might do it at that.

* * * *

Customer—Any good fish specials?

Waiter—They're not good, but they're always trying. Why don't you take some turkey?

Customer—Have you got turkey?

Waiter—No, but it's the sort of thing I like to refuse you. I don't know why, but I get a bigger kick out of refusing a customer turkey than, say, tripe.

Customer—Have you tripe?

Waiter—I'm afraid we have tripe today. It's not bad. It's on the OPA's Hit Parade of Meat Substitutes this week.

Customer—Could I have a baked potato with it?

Waiter—A Fifth Columnist, eh?

Customer—Just a small baked potato, with oleomargarine or catsup on it?

Waiter—You ought to know better than to go around asking for a baked potato. I've a good mind to report you.

Customer (pleadingly)—Don't do that, please. I was before OPA last month for trying to get a baked potato. This would be a second offense. I could lose my potato card.

Waiter (pretty tired and a little confused)—Now that you've had the main course, what do you wish for dessert?

Customer—I haven' had a thing yet!

Waiter—Trying to get out of paying your check, eh?

MEMO TO UNCLE SAM

The tax you plan for us next year
Has made the Nation gasp;
To figure it will be, I fear,
Beyond my poor mind's grasp.

I'll mail my weekly pay to you;
I promise not to pare it;
Just send me back a buck or two
Whenever you can spare it.

The OWI has released a report calling attention to alarming increases in juvenile delinquency. "Fathers are in the war, mothers have gone to work, roomers have crowded the home," it says. "There is no place for youngsters to play, no place for the older girls to have company. The living room is a bedroom."

* * * *

Maybe so in some cases. But there is another picture: Father is making big money in the defense plants, mother is neglecting the house to do a lot of things poorly and the home is full of silly adults behaving like college freshmen. The living room is a rumpus room, the kitchen is full of bottles and the kids go out into the streets where anything they encounter seems relatively wholesome. How about doing something about parental delinquency?

End of A Controversy

By Ernest K. Lindley

Transatlantic Criticism

PRIME MINISTER CHURCHILL wisely decided not to answer publicly the criticisms attributed to the five world-touring Senators. He appropriately called the attention of the House of Commons to the fact that the prepared summary of their conclusions released by the Senators did not contain the criticisms published as a result of their interviews with the press and their reports to what was supposed to be an executive session of the Senate. This was another of the many instances in which a relatively small percentage of criticism—some of it clearly directed at the President, rather than at the British—created more excitement than the bulk of favorable reaction.

LINDLEY

The criticisms, as they were relayed to the British public, appear to have caused much more of a commotion over there than they did on this side of the Atlantic. The response, in a portion of the British press, was as ill-informed as some of the criticisms made by the Senators and more ill-tempered. No good can come from a cartoon portraying the five Senators as monkeys who saw nothing, learned nothing, etc. The fact is that most, if not all, of them were fairly well-balanced in their reports, even when they were wrong as to specific details.

THE BRITISH seemed to have been angered most by the various intimations that they are not doing their utmost to win the war and they have abused lend-lease. The story that they had held back petroleum or gasoline from their reserves in the Persian Gulf while we used up our supplies was promptly nailed by the President. It was even more vigorously repudiated later by other American spokesmen familiar with the facts. There was nothing to it. American and British oil holdings have been pooled since the beginning of the war. The tanker shortage and the long haul involved before the Mediterranean was reopened were the reasons why British-controlled oil sources were not used to full capacity.

The charge that American trucks had been shipped to Australia for civilian use in unnecessarily large quantities was a straight factual error. The fact, as officially vouched for, is that not a single truck has been sent to Australia except at the request of General MacArthur, and none for use by civilians except as they were engaged in maintaining his supply lines.

The British have transferred to others lend-lease supplies sent to them, but only with the approval of the American authorities. We have drawn on the British at times to fulfill our commitments to others.

IF THEY had been more competent and responsible reporters, the Senators who made these criticisms would have tried to verify their facts before speaking. Their weightier complaints and questions were mostly concerned with postwar arrangements. They were disturbed at the indications the British were taking over politically and economically in the wake of the Allied armies. They wanted arrangements made for the use by our commercial airlines of various air fields built with American money. Some of them were concerned also about rights to bases for military use. These are problems which require action by the American and British governments. They have been discussed, if not fully explored, by the President and the Prime Minister and various officials of lesser rank on both sides. By their interest in these subjects the Senators indicated that they were thinking in terms of the enlarged role of the United States as a conscious world power.

When these questions are aired, even some of the more responsible British organs seem disposed to cry "Yankee imperialism."

There was a time when most of the American "news" in most of the British press was about Chicago gangsters and dance marathons. The British public has always—at least until very recently—been less well informed about the United States than the American public was about Britain. During the last two years the British press has carried more serious, balanced news about the United States, and the British Broadcasting Corp. has made an effort to give the British an education in the elements of American politics and social customs. American observers in Britain report that the British press is carrying more news day by day about the United States than ever before, not only relatively to other news but probably absolutely, in spite of the fact that, owing to the paper shortage, the standard British newspaper is only four pages. Partly due to this—although probably more largely to first-hand contact with the American fighting men on British soil—the British have found out that the typical American is not a gangster.

But the American and British publics have not reached the stage of familiarity where transatlantic criticism can be regarded quite as a family affair.

Further Gas Cuts in 1943 Held Unlikely

American motorists probably will have no further cuts in gasoline this year, but the prospects for 1944 are not so bright, Deputy Petroleum Administrator Ralph K. Davies told a Congressional Committee yesterday.

Presenting a general overall and up-to-date picture of the oil situation to the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, Davies said the need for increasing production of aviation and all-purpose military gasoline makes a reduction in civilian automotive fuel next year a "considerable possibility."

He noted recent senatorial suggestions that American oil supplies have been sorely depleted to meet war demands throughout the world, while British and other foreign holdings were not being utilized so extensively as they might be.

"There have been charges that the British have been hoarding their oil resources, thus making it necessary for the United States to draw inordinately upon its reserves," he said.

"The truth is that American and British oil resources have been employed jointly from the beginning of hostilities. It is true that the use of Middle Eastern oil was restricted somewhat during the period when the Mediterranean was unsafe for tankers and when our Allied tanker fleet was dangerously inadequate.

"Ships and tanks being scarce, we had to move as much oil as we could from the nearest source of supply. In the case of North Africa and England, that nearest source was the East Coast of the United States."

Paid McAdoo's Partner $5000, Bioff Declares

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 21.—William (Willie) Bioff, convicted racketeer, testified in Federal court today that he once paid $5000 to "Col. Bill" Neblett, whom he identified as a former law partner of the late U.S. Senator McAdoo of California, in an effort to halt a California legislative committee investigation of labor conditions in the film industry.

Cross-examined by James D. C. Murray, chief defense counsel, in the trial of eight men charged with conspired to extort more than one million dollars from the industry, Bioff said the payment was made "with the knowledge of" Louis B. Mayer, head of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; Nicholas Schenck, former head of Loew's Inc., and Leo Spitz, president of RKO Radio Pictures.

Says McAdoo Was Member

"Did any of the producers tell you he was a law partner of a man named Jones, member of the State Legislature of California?" Murray asked.

"Yes."

"And was United States Senator McAdoo also a member of the law firm?"

"Yes."

Bioff testified that Joseph Schenck, former Twentieth Century-Fox executive, paid for a 1938 trip to South America for Bioff and his wife, and that after he returned, Schenck also arranged a trip to Europe for him.

Questioned About Trip

"Was the purpose of that trip that Joe Schenck wanted to get you out of reach of United States income tax agents?" Murray asked. Bioff replied that he did not think so.

Asked whether Schenck had said, in discussing the trip to South America, that "the Government is investigating me and you better take a trip," Bioff replied:

"I don't know whether he said the Government was investigating him. There was a lot of investigations going on and I thought I better take a trip."

Patton Accorded New Fame As Author of Battle Poems

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 21.—Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, jr., known affectionately to his men as "Old Blood and Guts," was revealed as a poet today.

A poem which the editors said would take place "with the world's great war literature," was published in the current issue of the Woman's Home Companion. The hitherto unpublished work was turned over to the magazine, its editors said, by Mrs. Patton, who has cherished it ever since the general wrote it.

Mrs. Patton read two of her husband's poems before the annual Authors' Club dinner in Boston last ngiht.

General Patton, whose pearl-handled revolvers and daring in Tunisia and as head of the American Seventh Army in Sicily have became legend, wrote an apostrophe to the "God of Battles," a humble prayer for Divine guidance that would lead to victory.

The poem, which the Woman's Home Companion gave permission to quote:

God of Battles

From pride and foolish confidence
From every weakening creed
From the dread fear of fearing
Protect us, Lord, and lead.

Great God, who through the ages
Hast braced the blood-stained hand,
As Saturn, Jove or Woden
Hast led our warrior band,

Again we seek Thy counsel,
But not in cringing guise,
We whine not for thy mercy—
To slay: God make us wise.

For slaves who shun the issue
We do not ask Thy aid.
To Thee we trust our spirits,
Our bodies unafraid.

From doubt and fearsome 'boding,
Still Thou our spirits guard,
Make strong our souls to conquer,
Give us the victory, Lord.

Mayflower, Noted Yacht, Sails Again as Coast Guard Cutter

Though 48 years old if she's a day, America's one-time No. 1 glamour girl of the seas, the former presidential yacht Mayflower, is going back into war service.

A valiant fighter in the Spanish-American War, then a reigning queen of the waves through five presidential Administrations, and once given up as lost, the Mayflower is rejoining the United States Fleet as a warship.

Refitted, regunned and manned by a Coast Guard crew, the historic vessel was placed in commission Tuesday at the Norfolk Navy Yard as a Coast Guard cutter, the Navy announced yesterday.

The long service of the yacht includes participation in eight separate actions during the War with Spain in '98 and special duty in World War I. Purchased by the Navy in 1898 for $430,000, she joined the American blockading fleet off Havana, and besides trading blows with Spanish warships, captured blockade runners and landed raiding parties on Cuba's shores.

In 1902, President Theodore Roosevelt made the 320-foot vessel his personal yacht, and from then until the Coolidge Administration, the spic-and-span vessel was a familiar sight in the Potomac and at sea.

Kings and statesmen trod her decks. Foreign diplomats, nobility and visiting admirals were piped aboard. Royalty entertained aboard her included Kaiser Wilhelm II of Germany and King Edward VII of England.

President Wilson reviewed the victorious American North Seas Fleet from her decks in 1918.

Laid up by President Hoover in 1929 as a needless luxury, the Mayflower was later sold. She was gutted by fire in 1931 and almost entirely destroyed. Repurchased by the Navy, she is now ready for action as a trim man-o-war again.

Weekly Press 'Smeared,' Says Publisher

By the Associated Press

A Maryland weekly newspaper publisher yesterday accused Elmer Davis, director of the Office of War Information, of "smearing" the small-town press in a statement opposing the Bankhead bill for paid Government war bond advertising.

Paul G. Stromberg, Ellicott City, Md., quoted Davis as having told a congressional committee that weekly papers might become so dependent upon Government advertising that the administration in power would "be in a position to ruin any particular newspaper by withdrawing that advertising."

Stromberg, appearing before the Senate Banking Committee in support of the Bankhead bill, said Davis also had stated the weekly press was reliant now upon "county printing" but that this was all right because political control of counties was so distributed that neither party had the power "to ruin all the small newspapers."

"Ideals" of Weeklies

"That is an outright smear," Stromberg asserted. "Mr. Davis is going out of official bounds when he insinuates that the ideals of public service are set aside by the great bulk of weekly newspapers when they receive pay for advertising from local, county, State or Federal governments.

"The sale of advertising space is a merchandising proposition and its purchase by private business or Government has never involved the average publisher's espousal of any doctrine of the buyer."

Testimony in support of the Bankhead bill, which would authorize the Treasury to spend up to 30 million dollars yearly for war bond advertising in newspapers, was concluded yesterday, but Senators Taft (Republican) of Ohio and Ball (Republican) of Minnesota asked that Treasury representatives be called for a later hearing.

Treasury Opposed

The Treasury has opposed the measure on grounds that the present system of business and industry-supported bond advertising has proved satisfactory.

Witnesses appearing in support of the bill at yesterday's hearing were Ed M. Anderson, Brevard, N. C., chairman of the legislative committee of the National Editorial Association; John Redmon, publisher of the Burlington (Kans.) Daily Republican; W. J. Oertel, Syracuse, N. Y., manager of the New York Press Association; R. R. Barlow, Urbana, Ill., secretary of the Illinois Press Association, and Ben A. Green, editor and publisher of the Tallassee, Ala., Tribune and president of the Alabama Press Association.

The Gallup Poll

By Dr. George Gallup

Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 21.—During the past six months popular support of President Roosevelt for renomination in 1944 has increased among the rank and file of Democratic voters.

A new survey just completed by the Institute finds that Democratic voters are not only thinking in terms of one man only for 1944, but that there has been no crystalization of sentiment behind any other Democratic leader in the past six months. In fact, most of the other leaders of the party have less popular support today as possible candidates than they had last spring, whereas the number of Democrats favoring Roosevelt for renomination has increased from 79 per cent to 84 per cent.

The sentiments of rank and file Democrats have been measured at periodic intervals in surveys by the Institute in which each Democratic voter is given a list of various leaders who have been most widely discussed as possible presidential material. The voters are asked:

"Which one of these men would you prefer as the Democratic candidate for President next year?"

The choices at present are given below, together with those expressed in a similar survey last May. The table indicates not only the one-sidedness of the situation today, but also the fact that no other leaders but Roosevelt are emerging into the limelight.

	Today	Last May
Roosevelt	84%	79%
Wallace	5	8
Farley	4	5
Byrd	3	*
Byrnes	2	1
McNutt	2	4
Douglas	*	2
Winant	*	1

*Less than 1 per cent.

President Roosevelt's overwhelming lead raises important questions within the party. If he should choose not to run, it seems evident that the rank and file of Democrats would be at a loss for a while to know what leader to pick. With so many Democrats in favor of the President's renomination, the party will undoubtedly bring strong pressure to bear on him to run again.

Other Institute surveys have shown that without Roosevelt at the head of the ticket, the Democrats would face many grave problems in trying to achieve victory next year.

The situation within the Democratic Party is in sharp contrast to that within the GOP. Whereas the Democrats are virtually united in support of one man, polls among the rank and file of Republican voters show a wide division of sentiment so far as candidate choices are concerned.

Monopoly Seen In Marketing Of Vitamin D

By the Associated Press

Control of the anti-rickets vitamin—D—was linked by Assistant Attorney General Wendell Berge yesterday to a group of "monopolistic chemical, pharmaceutical and food companies" for which he said the Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation "acts as a screen."

Up to 1940, he asserted, the foundation received more than $8,500,000 in royalties by licensing to corporations at rates varying from 3 to 10 per cent a process for using artificial ultra-violet rays to activate their vitamin-carrying products.

His testimony, prepared for a Senate military subcommittee on war mobilization, pictured vitamin D as essential for proper bone growth and development, the prevention and cure of rickets and the prevention or reduction of tooth decay.

It was accompanied by a statement by Senator Kilgore (Democrat) of West Virginia, subcommittee chairman, that Berge's findings emphasized "the dangers inherent in all monopoly and cartel arrangements."

Kilgore is sponsoring a bill, now before the subcommittee, to make scientific discoveries available to small and large industries on an equal basis.

Berge said he wanted to make it clear the foundation had no formal connection with the University of Wisconsin, which he declared "has absolutely no control" over its policies and practices.

Attorney "Not Disturbed"

Chicago, Oct. 21 (AP).—George Haight, attorney for the Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation, said today he "was not at all disturbed" by charges that the foundation "acts as a screen" for control of manufacture of vitamin D.

"I think if it become necessary for us to answer the charges, we can very throughly answer them," Haight said.

Portable 'Firetraps' Still Used By D. C. Schools, Haycock Says

By Adele Bernstein

Post Staff Writer

Portable frame, one-room school houses, purchased by the District during the last war, still are in use despite their vulnerability to fire and cold only because wartime restrictions prevent building of adequate school structures, Robert L. Haycock, superintendent of schools, declared yesterday.

There are in wide use in Washington now, as adjuncts to Kimball, Benning, Stanton and several Negro elementary schools, which lack space for the increasing numbers of school children in their main buildings. The superintendent denied, however, that they were not properly equipped, at least, to cope with emergencies from fire and cold weather.

Two such portables, annexed to the Kimball School, at Minnesota ave. and E st. southeast, house more than 60 6- and 7-year-old children of the school's 560 pupils. Heated by a coal furnace which sits in the one-room structure, it is, nevertheless, unable to keep the children warm because of broken window panes.

Although requests for replacement of the panes, both in the portables and in the main building, were made as far back as June, according to Dorothy M. Lewis, principal, the Board of Education has not yet repaired them. As a result, children in those classrooms must wear their out-of-door clothing to keep warm.

Another serious factor in the situation is the lack of heat in halls and toilets in the portables. During cold weather the young children are forced to leave heated rooms for the icy-cold facilities.

Kimball School, a permanent brick structure, should house no more than 350 to 400 students. Although 500 are crammed into the 9 or 10 classrooms already, with waiting lists for the kindergarten classes, Dr. Haycock foresaw little possibility that the Federal Works Administration would grant the District funds under the Lanham Act for additional construction.

"We must show that a school has a 50 per cent over-plus of the capacity before such funds will be released," he explained. "The Patterson School is suffering from the same situation, but for the time being we can do more than use what facilities are available to us."

WFA Announces Freight Subsidy On Western Apples

The War Food Administration (WFA) announced yesterday it would pay a portion of the freight charges on apples shipped from Washington, Oregon and Western Idaho into designated markets in Eastern and Central States.

The payments are designed, WFA said, to enable the northwestern apples to compete with eastern-grown apples under present price ceilings.

The ceilings do not take into account the normal freight differentials between the northwestern producing areas and the central and eastern markets.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Well, the District Boxing Commission seems to have messed it proper, now. They've driven Battling Mike Uline out of the boxing business and reduced Washington to a jerk fight town. It couldn't have been better butched if they had made a life study of it.

POVICH

Uline retired his big arena from the boxing business the other day, declaring "life is too short to keep battling the boxing commission." But before he hung up his gloves, he let fly at the commission with a beaut. He says they put the squeeze on him; that one commissioner demanded 110 free passes in the $5 ringside section of one fight; that they tried to fix the price scale of his shows; that they wouldn't let him operate on Monday nights and that they suggested that Joe Turner be permitted to promote at his arena.

Uline's was Washington's only pretense of a big league fight club during the winter months. It's 6,500 seats could house the better shows, and did. His arena permitted the champions and near champs to fight here and get a pretty good pay day. The place had class and atmosphere and the peepul liked the fights there.

Now with Uline out of business, Turner's Arena remains for fight fans to take or leave. That latter is not difficult. The former garage on W st. seats only 2200 and its appointments are something less than paradisical. The meager purses it must offer preclude anything more attractive than a near-headliner versus a set-up or a bout between the better matched local yokel who don't rate much pay.

Chairman Claude Owen of the Boxing Commission assumed a very lofty tone when asked for comment on Uline's charges. "We have no business with Uline," he said. "He's just a landlord with a hall to rent. He doesn't hold a promoter's or a matchmaker's license. We have no contractual relation with Uline whatsoever."

Be that as it may, Uline has seen fit to get out of the boxing business because, as he says, he can't get along with the commissioners. Owen says they didn't attempt to fix the prices of his shows. Uline says they did. Owen expressed doubt that any commissioner asked for as many as 110 passes to one show, and says that it wasn't he. Uline says he was given one of the commissioner's checks for the Government tax on that many passes to one show.

"I spent $700,000 building an arena in Washington and I expected to get cooperation from the city officials, but the boxing commission has heckled me from start to finish,," says Uline. "The police recently complimented my arena on our handling of the crowds, but a few weeks ago I received a letter from Mr. Owen demanding that I have more men on the doors. The commission has been nothing but a bother to me."

The big rub is, according to Uline, that the commission wouldn't let him operate on the choice Monday nights unless he gave Joe Turner one Monday night per month at his arena. "Who are they to tell me which promoter I have to hire?" he asks. "And what is their great interest in Turner? I don't want him pomorting my fights. I was satisfied with my own promoter."

Owen denies that he insisted that Turner be given one Monday night there a month. "We tried to protect a man who has been operating on Monday nights for years. Washington couldn't stand more than two big fight shows a month, and Turner ought to have one of them."

We'd say the commission is entirely too zealous in its attempts to protect Turner, whose claim on the commission is vague, anyway. The commission's first interest would seem to be that of the public which has shown more of a liking for Uline's fights than Turner's. Uline has been producing the better shows.

The commission was set up to administer boxing in Washington to the best interest of the sport, not of the promoters, and it isn't doing that. The fan who pays the buck ten or more doesn't give a hoot who is staging the show, even if Mr. Owen does. He wants to see a good fight in an arena that is at least comfortable, and now he gets no fights at Uline's because the commission has made it too hot for the arena owner.

"I may not have a promoter's or a matchmaker's license, but I've got a big financial interest in the fights staged at my place," says Uline, "and the boxing business isn't worth fooling with if they don't let me have at least two Monday nights a month. That's all I want. On other nights I can make more profit with public skating. As it is a fight show kills a whole day of skating. I can rent my ice to clubs for $40 an hour, and there's no manpowerr required to operate skating. The skaters don't take the ice with them. It's always there. I averaged $521 on our last 10 fight shows. That's not worth bothering with, and taking a lot of stuff off the commissioners besides."

Ring Body Tells Uline To Mind Own Business

Arena Owner Has No Standing in Boxing Game, Commission Edict Declares

By Al Costello

Post Staff Writer

The District Boxing Commission, showing little visible concern over the blast Mike Uline directed at it Tuesday when he announced he was drop-kicking boxing matches out, of his Arena, yesterday politely, but emphatically, told the outspoken Dutchman to mind his own business, and leave boxing commission affairs to the boxing gentry.

The Commission, through Chairman Claude W. Owen, issued a brief, but concise statement in answer to Uline's announcement that he would not house future boxing bouts at his Arena on any other nights but Mondays. The statement said:

"To Members of the Press:

"Regarding the controversy in the public prints (the story appeared exclusively in The Post yesterday morning) precipitated by Mr. Mike Uline over the disposition of Monday night dates for boxing, the Boxing Commission does not desire to enter into a discussion with Mr. Uline on this matter.

"Mr. Uline holds no promoter's license with this Commission, and as such has no standing before it. CLAUDE W. OWEN,
"Chairman."

Unline's main reason in ousting boxing bouts from his spacious arena came after the boxing barons repeatedly refused Promoter Goldie Ahearn Monday night dates, which night is habitually claimed by Promoter Joe Turner for bouts at his Turner's Arena. Uline contended that Monday is the only feasible night for him as it is a slow ice skating night. Interruption of the public skating programs other nights, Uline claims, would result in the loss of too much revenue compared to what he would take in from his fight rental.

Turner Gets the Nod

The commission has taken the stand that Turner, due to his prior claims and continuous use of Monday nights, is entitled to first choice of that night.

Uline last week visited the Boxing Commission with his lawyer asking for Monday dates, but the commission turned down his request, after Owen explained to Uline he had no standing before the boxing body.

The commission's politely worded statement leaves little to the imagination. It implies that Uline has no business whatsoever in asking for any dates simply because he hasn't a promoter's license and has no more business interfering with the commission than the commission would have in trying to run Uline's ice business.

Ahearn to Make Appeal

The statement does, however, leave room for Promoter Goldie Ahearn, who has been successfully presenting boxing bouts at Uline's Arena, to come before it and again apply for a Monday night. Should Ahearn, a licensed and accepted promoter, make such a request, the commission necessarily must take the matter under consideration and issue a ruling.

Ahearn, late yesterday, said he would appear before the commission at its next meeting (Monday at 2 p. m.) and apply for at least two Mondays per month. Ahearn, refused Mondays before, now is in a position to tell the commission that unless he be given some Monday nights must go out of business

Spears Seeks To Strengthen Terp Defense

A defense which he hopes will stop a heavier Penn State's offense, spearheaded by Marine Trainee Bobby Williams, who starred last week in the Nittany Lions' vicious but losing stand against Navy, is being experimented with by "Doc" Spears and his University of Maryland Old Liners, who meet the Nittanys tomorrow at College Park in the annual homecoming game.

Williams it was who passed the Penn Staters into position for the touchdown which he personally scored a few plays later against Navy. Maryland scouts reported the Marine was an excellent passer and runner and praised his defensive ability.

Other Penn State stars are Jim Graham, a former George Washington player, who also starred against the Middies and who with Aldo Cenci, a 230-pound blocking quarterback, kept the Middies at bay most of the game with their zooming punts.

The Penn State line will have a considerable weight advantage over the Terps of something like 15 pounds per man. The old-line backfield of Joe Makar, quarter; Charley Ryan, and Dick Tuschak, halves, and Bill Pirronello at fullback will be outweighed by some 20 pounds by the Nittany Lion quartet. Penn State lost one of its aces this week to the Army when Earl (Sparky) Brown, fullback, was forced to quit the squad.

Four times previously Penn State and Maryland have clashed with the Nittany Lions victorious each time. Despite being outweighed substantially, the Old-Line forward wall again may be expected to give a good account of itself. To date, in four games, in which the Old Liners have split even, the Terp forward wall has not yielded a touchdown, and, Spears points out with pardonable pride, very little yardage.

Penn State will be a heavy favorite, but the Old Liners are confident they have better than an outside chance. The entire squad has chosen Penn State as the game of the year.

Notre Dame-Navy Tickets All Gone

Cleveland, Oct. 21 (AP).—All tickets for the Notre Dame-Navy football game in Cleveland's lake front stadium, October 30, have been sold, Ben Franklin of the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce announced tonight.

The sellout will asure a capacity crowd of 80,000 for the clash between the unbeaten Irish and Middies.

Major League Attendance Shows Drop

Three New York Clubs Take Loss; Nats Third in Loop With 117,000 Gain

By Judson Bailey

Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Oct. 21.—Major league attendance this year fell off 13 per cent in a drop that was largely attributable to lack of any real pennant competition.

But the most startling fact revealed by unofficial figures compiled today by the Associated Press was that almost the entire net loss was by the three New York clubs.

Altogether big league baseball drew 7,714,636 compared with 8,874,755 in 1942, a decrease of 1,160,119.

The biggest loss was in the National League, 697,002, or about 15 per cent, although the senior circuit again topped the American League numerically with crowds totaling 3,967,755.

American "Gate" Declines

The American League drew 3,746,881, a decline of 463,117, or approximately 11 per cent.

The biggest loss of any one club was in Brooklyn, which slumped 399,227 after drawing over a million for three of the previous years. Yet the Dodgers still topped both leagues with 688,633. The Giants, with a last place club, fell off 361,269 and together the Giants and Dodgers lost more than the net drop of the entire National League.

The Yankees dropped 303,213, making a combined loss for the three New York clubs of 1,063,709. The biggest loss in the American League, however, was by the weak Boston Red Sox, who skidded 376,335 from the record level of 741,026 last year.

Not all the figures had to be entered in red ink, for five clubs showed gains. The biggest was for the rehabilitated Phillies, who mare than doubled their 1942 gate. This year they drew 466,876, compared with 230,183 in 1942.

Washington Shows Gain

The Pittsburgh Pirates also showed a gain of 42,211 in the National League and others might at least have matched last year's attendance if the pennant race had not become a walkaway for St. Louis in the closing weeks. The Cardinals were among the clubs affected, failing by 26,278 to measure up to their previous year's turnout.

In the American League, Detroit gained 40,048 to draw 620,135, the highest in the circuit; Washington moved into third place with 580,000, an increase of 177,000; and the Chicago White Sox gained 82,088.

Ga. Tech to Lose 11 V-12 Gridmen

Atlanta, Oct. 21 (AP).—The Navy is firing a heavy salvo into Georgia Tech's football hopes. Eleven V-12 varsity players, including Tech's captain and center, George (Mutt) Manning, are being transferred.

All will play their final game against the U. S. Naval Academy at Baltimore Saturday. Transfers will send them thence to other training stations.

Besides Manning, a standout all-American candidate, the Engineers will lose Wilbur Stein and Al Faulkner, first-string blocking backs; Bill Harper and Harry Morrow, starting tackles; Ed Ryckeley and Duck Smith, reserve wingbacks; Al McDonald, starting fullback of the Notre Dame game; Gene Hill, starting end; Eddie Atkinson, alternate guard, and Dick Lowrey, reserve center.

Redskins Are Warned Against Letup Sunday

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Post Staff Writer

Sparing his semi-cripples but driving the healthy Redskins through a 2½-hour-workout, followed by a meeting, Coach Dutch Bergman continued to impress upon his squad last night the danger of a letdown in the Chicago Cardinal game Sunday in Griffith Stadium, the undefeated 'Skins third league test.

With the game three days away Bergman would make no definite commitments as to his injured players but this was the status as of last night's lengthy practice:

Center George Smith, who played 15 minutes on a badly bruised foot last Sunday against Green Bay, limped around the early portion of the workout but confined his activities to snapping a few passes from center. He was hurt late in the second period last week. Smith is a probable player, mostly on offense, but a doubtful starter.

Masterson Tests Ankle

End Bob Masterson, idle last week due to a sprain suffered in the Dodger game, took three trips around the playing field, testing his still swollen ankle. He spent most of the evening on the rubbing table and will probably remain on the bench this week.

Halfback Andy Farkas, on the sidelines with a leg infection, a carry-over from the Bainbridge scrimmage, is expected to test his swollen leg today. Farkas will be available Sunday but may give way to Bob Seymour in the starting lineup.

Tackle Willie Wilkin, who played a few minutes last week, his first competition since receiving a leg injury in the Navy scrimmage, worked with the starting team last night but Big Bill is not himself yet and will probably alternate with rookie Lou Rymkus.

Guard Steve Slivinski will start Sunday, his wrist in a cast due to a small broken bone.

Sub quarterback Coye Dunn, slugged with a piece of lead pipe Tuesday night after tussling with a group of youths who broke into his car, suffered cuts and lacerations painful at the time but will be available for play with the second string backfield.

Hayden Works on Passing

Bergman was pleased with Ted Lapka's fill-in job for Masterson last week and has acceptable replacements for Farkas, in Seymour, and Wilkin, in Rymkus, but should Smith be out the center position may be a weak spot.

Ken Hayden, who came to the Redskins in the Roy Zimmerman trade, played with the T-formation last year where the center merely hands the ball to the quarterback, who plays smack against the line, and Hayden's passing is a trifle rusty. Ken has been working hard all week, however, and with Clyde Shugart, now a roving lineman, available for center duty, the 'Skins could turn up with ample protection.

The Cardinals, the Rover boys of the league as they will not return to Chicago for nearly three weeks, preceded the 'Skins in a stadium workout yesterday. Coach Phil Handler's squad played in Buffalo last Sunday and took up quarters here Tuesday.

Gamecocks Stage Rally In Last Half

Three Swift Drives Net Touchdowns in Third Period After Clemson Takes Lead

By the Associated Press

Columbia, S. C., Oct. 21.—South Carolina's Gamecocks kept 18,000 sweltering State Fair fans on the edge of their seats for two periods today before living up to pregame predictions by turning loose a bevy of swivel-hipped backs who ripped off five touchdowns and tucked away a State championship by defeating an outclassed pack of Clemson yearling Tigers, 33 to 6.

The Tigers more than held their own during the first half behind the fine punting of Marion (Butch) Butler, one of two upperclassmen on their squad, and went into the intermission with a 6-0 lead.

Gamecocks Cut Loose

The Gamecocks' vaunted versatility, sluggish at the start, came to the fore in the third period as they ripped off three touchdowns, then added two more in the final stanza as the weary Tigers, minus the steadying presence of Butler, who was injured late in the second period, went to pieces.

Butler dominated the first half play as his booming boots of 50 and 60 yards kept the Gamecocks with their back to the goal which Jim Taylor, Tiger flankman, crossed on an end-around from 6 yards out just as the second period got under way.

Deprived of the services of their bustling Butch, the Tigers were helpless as they watched Gene Wagnon score two touchdowns and Cantore, Williams and McMillan add singles in the closing periods.

Western Rules Favorite Over Central Today

With Central High School in the strange setting of the cellar position in the interhigh football championship race, arch-rival Western rules a prohibitive favorite today in a renewal of one of the city's outstanding scholastic rivalries.

With two victories in three starts, mainly due to the ground gaining ability of Brian Bell and Bill Stratos, Western will be after a second-place berth in the standings as the Red Raiders entertain Central at 4 o'clock in the Western stadium.

Unbeaten Coolidge figures to continue its winning ways against Anacostia on the latter's field, also at 4 p. m. With Anacostia's Jim Flaherty an extremely doubtful starter due to a shoulder injury, the Colts should continue their unbeaten pace.

The spot game of the series will be played tomorrow with Eastern meeting Tech in Central Stadium at 3 p. m.

An outside game between Roosevelt and Washington-Lee may take the play from the series games today as the Generals have an unbeaten, untied string of 13 straight and the Rough Riders were considered the class of the interhigh series until their loss to Wilson last week.

St. Alban's will go to Wilmington, Del., today to meet St. Andrews, while Georgetown Prep will test Wilson at Wilson. George Washington High will play host to Fairfax tonight in Alexandria.

Three Horses Die In Fire at Track

Collinsville, Ill., Oct. 21 (AP).—Three race horses burned to death today in a fire that destroyed 12 of the 24 horse barns at the Fairmount race track.

Crill L. Burge, assistant fire chief, said the fire was believed to have spread from a bonfire used by stablehands to heat coffee. Damage was estimated at $42,000. Thirty-two other horses were led to safety and the track headquarters and grandstand were not endangered.

Navy-Tech on WINX

Station WINX will broadcast the Navy-Georgia Tech football game tomorrow from the Municipal Stadium in Baltimore, starting at 6:45 p. m. The kickoff is set for 7 p. m.

DiMaggio Unable Appear in Court

Los Angeles, Oct. 21 (INS).—"Military restrictions" prevented Sergt. Joe DiMaggio, former New York Yankee star, from appearing in court today to face the alimony and child support claims of his estranged wife, Dorothy Arnold, pending trial of her divorce suit. The case was continued until November 10.

Miss Arnold, formerly in the movies, is asking for $500 a month for herself and for $150 for the support of 2-year-old Joseph Paul DiMaggio.

Pitt-Nebraska Game Is Canceled

Pittsburgh, Oct. 20 (AP).—James Hagan, University of Pittsburgh athletic director, today announced that the Pitt-Nebraska football game scheduled for November 13 at Lincoln has been canceled due to transportation difficulties.

Golden Greek on Card

George Macricostas, the Golden Greek, who virtually stole the show last week in his 30-minute draw with Michele Leone, has been signed for a headline role on next Wednesday night's wrestling show at Turner's Arena.

Charles Town Race DatesOkayed

Charles Town, W. Va., Oct. 21.—A 15-days racing season, from November 29 and ending December 16, has been approved for the Charles Town race by the West Virginia Racing Commission, State Senator W. P. C. Perry, secretary to A. J. Boyle, principal figure in the track, said yesterday.

Virtually all officials connected with the track in former meetings will be on hand for the opening day, Perry said.

Bertelli to End Career Oct. 30

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 21 (AP).—Pass-Slinging Angelo Bertelli, wheel horse of Frank Leahy's mighty Notre Dame Irish, will don the Blue and Gold for the last time against the Navy at Cleveland October 30.

That was the word today from Capt. H. P. Burnett, commanding officer of the Notre Dame V-12 School, who said Bertelli would be included among a contingent of Marine trainees shipped to Parris Island, S. C., on November 1.

Hamberg-Prokop Duel Promises Fireworks

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Oct. 21.—Spectators at the Navy-Georgia Tech football game in Baltimore Saturday night are more than likely to witness some colorful aerial fireworks in the persons of T. Eddie Prokop and the Middies' Hal Hamberg.

Pointing out that the Engineers' pill heaver has the ability to toss long and short passes with exceptional accuracy, Navy's coaches also call attention to Hamberg, the 150-pound back who is such a whiz at shooting passes to Tar receivers.

There's no doubt that the Rambling Wreck from Atlanta will do its utmost to break the Middies' record of no defeats in four games.

The Tech Yellow Jackets were overwhelmed by the Notre Dame Irishmen in the second half of their game two weeks ago, after battling the South Bend, Ind., V-12 Unit almost to a standstill through the first half.

Notre Dame is Navy's next opponent after the Middies meet Tech, so Capt. John E. Wheichel, Navy's head coach, and his staff will be watching Saturday's clash as some indication of what edges will have to be polished before the Tars meet the Irish in Cleveland October 30.

While the Engineers will have the services of Red Broyles, an outstanding punter, all-round back and generally dangerous opponent when he has possession of the ball, Navy will pit the talents and resourcefulness of Backs Hillis Hume and Ben Martin to start against the best the Georgians can offer.

Naval Academy officials announced, meanwhile, that 13 companies of Midshipmen, or approximately 2000 Middies, would travel by boat to Baltimore for the game and would march into the Muncipal Stadium at 6:25 p. m.

Kickoff time for the game is 7 p. m.

Quarter Moon, 5-2, Wins Maryland $5000 Futurity

Straus Colt Triumphs in Rough Trip

By Walter Haight

Post Staff Writer

Pimlico, Md., Oct. 21.— Quarter Moon, a son of Lady in the Moon, shined brightly here this afternoon, carrying off the coveted $5000 added Maryland Futurity before 13,000 customers. Quarter Moon, owned by H. L. Straus and bred at the Cherry Hill Farm at Reisterstown, Md., lasted under strong handling by Jockey Jimmy Thornburg to win by three parts of a length in the thirteenth annual battle over the 6-furlong course.

Quarter Moon finished in front of W. L. Brann's Picotee and the latter had a half-length advantage over Mrs. P. A. Rothfuss' Cactus Foot. A field of 13 competed over a fast track and the winner, a $5.10 favorite, was clocked in 1:14 2-5.

The victory was the third in 10 starts for the Straus juvenile, and he added $5020 to bring his winnings for the year to $8055.

Winner Has Rough Trip

Thornburg had Quarter Moon off in the first flight but had to weave him between horses to get him to the front in the opening furlong. Topping and Ataman ran with Quater Moon to the far turn but the ultimate winner shook off this pair to draw out gradually.

In the stretch, Quarter Moon seemed to have a safe lead. However, Thornburg kept pumping and it is well that he did for Picotee, a brother of Pictor, answered Jockey George Woolf's urging and came with a bold rush. But in the final 20 yards, Picotee swerved in behind Quarter Moon and almost ran up on the leader's heels. Woolf jerked Picotee out of that trouble and leveled him off again but the Challenger II colt's final move came too late.

Double Pays $126.40

Maryland-owned winners figured in both ends of the $126.40 daily double. In the first race, Mrs. Veader Leonard's Loch Ness, paying $22.90, came from behind to win. In the second race, Mrs. R. H. Heighe's Sparker also came from behind and brought his backers a $10.40 mutuel.

For a change, the day's steeplechase was conducted without accident. Montpelier's Bavarian went to the front under Jockey J. S. Harrison's handling and stayed there, winning over Lancastrian and Raylwyn. Bavarian was a $3.60 favorite, clocked in 3:56 4-5 for the 2 miles.

Commission Says Uline Is Out of Step

as a promoter because Uline again yesterday insisted that Monday and Mondays only would be available for boxing at his plant.

The commission, naturally, does not want either Turner to suffer and lose any Mondays which it believes he is justly entitled to, nor does it want to sit back and see Ahearn go out of business through unforeseen circumstances such as having his arena taken away from him.

Chairman Owen said recently he was convinced Washington was enjoying the greatest boxing year in history and accredited the competition between Turner and Ahearn, which makes for better and more fights, one of the main reasons. Owen added he hoped a suitable compromise could be worked out.

But Owen feels until such time as the Boxing Commission is petitioned by an accredited promoter, such as Ahearn, it can do nothing officially on the request of an outsider, which it regards Uline.

Only Asking Rights, Uline Declares

Notified of the commission's stand last night, Uline snorted his contempt at the statement "Humph," he said, "The commission has been sticking its nose into my business for the past couple of years without any reason or excuse. I don't see where I, as a taxpayer, and a big one, havent the right to demand my just deserts from the city's public officers—which is what the boxing commissioners happen to be."

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Postwar Plans Laid For Federal Agencies

Uncle Sam has taken the first step toward making comprehensive postwar plans for his scores of Government agencies and 3,100,000 civilian workers. The Budget Bureau, it was learned, has asked or will ask each Federal agency what plans it has made for conversion back to a peacetime basis. And it's suggested for agencies that have no plans that they had beter get to work. Moreover, the budget is collecting a list of all the agencies, laws, executive orders and general authority that'll expire when the war ends. Meantime, it's reported, the office of Assistant President Jimmy Byrnes is also looking into certain postwar phases such as the effect the war's end will have on Government-owned arsenals and shipyards.

KLUTTZ

Obviously the White House offices intend to do something with all the information that's being collected or they wouldn't bother with it. Each agency can have its own plan, but the conversion must be directed from the top and the many different proposals must be made to dovetail into a general pattern. In a recent speech Byrnes said that each Federal agency should have at least one competent person working on postwar plans. Later, the President asked him to set up a unit in his office, apparently to coordinate the work. No one has been appointed to head up the unit and the question of jurisdiction of Byrnes' office and the Budget Bureau hasn't been settled.

Further, the Civil Service Commission is reported to be making a study on how best to cut off tens of thousands of employes from the payrolls and what can be done for the employes to cushion the blow. We all know by this time that temporaries and war service appointees will be among the first to be separated. Some of these people will have annual leave accumulated and they'll be able to draw their paychecks up to 90 days while they're looking for work elsewhere. But for the most part the people who will be fired will have only a few days' leave accumulated as they will be relatively new in the service.

The man in a private war plant who is let out during the conversion period will have a distinct advantage over the Government worker. He'll be able to draw unemployment compensation up to six months in most State. In addition, he'll get serveance pay from many employers, which is comparable to annual leave. The former private employe who takes a Federal job in wartime is further penalized by having his Social Security account lapsed during his stay in Government. Under the present system, he'll never be able to draw a full annuity. The time he spends in Government will result in a smaller annuity as there is no provision to pay up his account. Perhaps these future inequalities is one of the reasons the Government is finding it so hard to hire people.

It's entirely possible that the commission, backed up by the Administration, may recommend some sort of unemployment insurance for Federal workers to help them over the postwar hump. The commission, though wary of it, is said to have tentatively agreed to a plan which would give war service appointees the opportunity to pay up their Social Security accounts. It's now being proposed that the Social Security law be amended to include this change. Diehards at the commission have consistently opposed any tie-in between the Civil Service retirement system and the Social Security Board, despite the fact that there are an estimated 1,800,000 war service appointees who now must contribute 5 per cent of their salaries to the retirement fund and only a handful of them will ever get any benefit from it. And the cost of handling this money and paying it back to hundreds of thousands of people must be tremendous. You must be in the Federal service for at least five years to get a pension. Otherwise the deductions will be refunded.

PREDICTION: A new four-star general will be named soon by the President. England may be the base of his operations. . . PREDICTION: Office of Price Administration will get around finally to fixing ceiling prices on used autos. . . . Commodity Credit Corporation has worked out an arrangement with Foreign Economic Administration to handle imported foods that will be purchased by FEA. CCC's foreign food purchases work is in the process of being transferred to FEA. . . . Senator Pepper is assembling a staff for his subcommittee that will investigate community needs for utilities and services. The postwar implications are tremendous. . . . Bob Horton, one of Uncle Sam's best information men, will leave Interior to take an Army commission in military government. . . . Harry A. Cox will celebrate 50 years of service in the Navy Department tomorrow. He's a naval architect and in 1909 he was superintendent of construction after the Messina earthquake. The King of Italy gave him a medal for his work. Cox's past 22 years have been spent here in the Bureau of Ships.

Junior Board Studies Home Rule Plans

Attitude to Be Made Known Soon; Compromise Idea May Be Discussed

The Board of Directors of the Junior Board of Commerce will make known the attitude of the organization on the question of home rule for Washington a week from Monday, it was announced last night by President Winfield Weitzel.

Speaking for himself, Weitzel said the home rule proposal might be a step in the right direction. A special committee, now considering the proposal will confer with the directors.

It was indicated, Weitzel said, that the committee may discuss a compromise bill that would give the District both home rule and a representative in Congress as provided in different bills, but passage of one does not guarantee the adoption of the other.

There are three bills in Congress. They are:

The House Delegate Bill. This bill would allow the District to be represented in Congress by a non-voting delegate, the same as applies to Alaska.

The Holman Charter Commission Bill. This bill would grant to the District the right to select the type of District government it wished, but the choice would be confined to purely District government, and does not include a selection of any proposal in connection with representation in Congress.

The McCarran Bill. This bill establishes the type of District government by the creation of seven wards, each with an elected commissioner, who would appoint a city manager subject to the approval of the Senate.

The Washington Board of Trade has come out in opposition to the McCarran bill but favors something more like the House Delegate Bill.

Ration Book 4 Distribution To End Today

Slightly more than half the estimated 750,000 to 800,000 ration book holders in Washington are expected to apply today between 7 a. m. and 9 p. m. for Ration Book Four, and bring to a close the fourth food allotment registration since the war statred.

Approximately 380,000 copies of the books were scheduled to have been issued yesterday to householders, Government workers, officials, and others living in Washington, whose names began with the letters A through J. Fifty-one per cent of the total registration is expected today, when those names fall into the K through Z category form queues before school teachers and volunteer registrants.

A new system, devised by Boise Bristor of the Board of Education's statistical division, reportedly saved the weary workers necessity for recording some 5000 names.

Crews of statistical division employes, trained well in advance for their role as registrants, visited the two Houses of Congress, the District Building, Supreme Court and other Government agencies to distribute War Ration Book 4 to applicants. Previously, Government workers whose absence for registration purposes must be kept to a minimum, were sent in blocs of 500 to the schools in their neighborhoods.

Gas Workers Continue Fight For Pay Raise

The District of Columbia Gas Workers Union will not give up the fight to get a wage boost for the more than 1400 employes of the Washington Gas Light Co., J. Loren Freund, union attorney, said yesterday, following the decision of the Regional War Labor Board to deny a request for a two per cent increase, due to the workers under a contract signed with the company in June, 1942.

Freund, union attorney, said yesthe personnel have received only a 13.3 per cent boost and that the over-all average was 14.5 per cent, which would entitle the workers to an additional half per cent even under the Little Steel formula.

Disclaiming the contention of the WLB that "present rates paid this group of workers already compared favorably with the earnings of workers engaged in similar occupations in the area," Freund declared that a particular hardship existed among the company's laborers whose wages compare very unfavorably with wages paid to laborers working on "cost plus contracts."

A decision as to concrete steps to be taken by the union will be made within the next few days,, Freund said. David L. McGonegal of 3611 Oak Lane, Mount Rainier, is president of the union.

OPA Penalizes 6 Handlers of Rationed Food

The Stables and Hammel's, two Washington restaurants, were barred yesterday from purchasing meats, butter, fats or cheese until they have balanced their OPA ration accounts. Four other food handlers also were suspended from purchases of rationed goods.

The penalties were imposed by OPA Hearing Commissioner Clifford R. Snider after administrative hearings in the Municipal Court building.

J. Austin Fraley, who operates a meat stall at the Northeast Market, was barred from selling meat until December 31, 1944, when the statute under which OPA operates expires. Of this case, Snider said, "This is a clear case of what constitutes a black market. All such places as that should be closed."

5-Day Suspensions

The following were given five-day suspension beginning November 8 and ordered to first balance their ration accounts before resuming sale of products:

Arthur W. Metrio, operator of Shapiro's market, 4130 Georgia ave. nw. His meat account was overdrawn 10,337 points.

Leonard Parcover, proprietor of Lee's Market, 523 M st. ne. His sugar account was overdrawn 2128 pounds and his processed food 25,045 points.

Henry Millstein, proprietor of Little Giant Market, 300 Massachussets ave. nw. His account on meats was overdrawn 10,000 points.

Sought Increase in Vain

The Stables, located at 2622 E st. nw., is operated by Mrs. Lillian J. Richards. She said that she had vainly tried many times to have her ration quotas raised by her ration board on the ground that her business was increasing by at least $300 each week. She may have to go out of business until her account is balanced some four months from now, she said.

Hammel's, at 416 10th st. nw., is operated by Harry Kopel. It was estimated it would take 2½ months for Kopel to make up the deficit.

Representing the OPA were John L. Laskey, chief District OPA attorney, and Carl W. Berueffy, chief enforcement attorney.

Charges against four other establishments were postponed until October 29. They were Stanley Horner, 4th st. and Florida ave. ne., ration violations; Dargan's Cafe, 3847 Minnesota ave. ne.; Max Rabinovitz, 1310 Seventh st. nw., and F. Rosso, 919 4th st. se.

40 Leaders to Meet Today on Forum Plans

More than 40 leaders of the District's business and fraternal organizations will meet today at 5:15 p. m. at the home of Gifford Pinchot, 1615 Rhode Island avenue northwest, to discuss plans for the forthcoming series of United Nations Forum lectures at Constitution Hall.

Edgar Morris, president of the Morris Sales Corporation, will be chairman of the meeting which will be attended by Granville Gude, president of the Board of Trade, and other civic leaders. The first lecture is scheduled for November 22.

Victory Sidelights

Air-Raid Warnings Priorities Denied by Army-Navy Board

The Army-Navy Munitions Board apparently felt that there was so little likelihood of an air raid on Washington that they turned down a request for priorities for aircraft warning material made several months ago by District OCD officials.

Porter Lumpkins, executive officer of the District OCD told of the rebuff at the hands of the military board at a meeting of the Police and Fire Committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations held at the Bond Building last night. The session was called to investigate the feasibility of surprise blackouts.

As a result, Lumpkins said, defense officials had to "scour junkyards" for much of the necessary materials.

Both Lumpkins and Chief Air Raid Warden William J. Mileham testified in favor of surprise' blackouts called during a previously announced period of time. In this way the public would know that an alert was coming without knowing the exact time.

Lumpkins declared that the Army, which has had the responsibility of ordering blackouts in the District since June, pays no attention to the wishes of the local OCD.

Fear that public interest in OCD is lagging, was expressed by Lumpkins who testified that officials are "trying every way possible to keep the men interested."

Walter C. Lockhart, deputy chief of the rescue squad, however, later admitted to a reporter that at a meeting of local OCD officials Wednesday, October 13, it was decided to recommend the calling of more blackouts to Gen. John T. Lewis, commander of the Military District of Washington.

In the meantime, it was learned that Mileham in a letter to Commissioner John Russell Young, regional director of civilian defense, asked that "proper authorities" be urged to call three raid alerts each month.

The committee will meet again November 1, to draw up recommendations to be made at the meeting of the federation November 6.

Red Cross Awards

Two hundred local firemen received Red Cross first aid certificates Wednesday night, it was announced yesterday. This brings the total of those completing the Fire Department course to 850.

Speaker at the presentation was Comdr. B. W. Hogan of the Navy Medical Corps, who said that during war action it is not unusual for as many as 600 men to be injured in a period of two or three minutes, during which time emergency treatment saves many lives. He said surgery is not possible at scenes of combat, but that first aid, such as that taught by the Red Cross, must be used.

Navy Week Events

Navy Week celebrations will begin tonight when a mass dance for naval personnel will be held at 9 p. m. at Luline Arena. Gov. Charles Edison of New Jersey, newly elected honorary president of the Navy League, will address the gathering in a Nation-wide two-minute broadcast.

Eric A. Johnston, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, will be the principal speaker of the Navy Day dinner at the Mayflower Hotel October 27. Preceding it, at noon, there will be the traditional ceremonies at the monument of John Paul Jones. Special Navy Day luncheons will be given by the Rotary and Lions Clubs.

$50 Blackout Fine

Harold Dibble, manager of the Suburban Gardens housing project, 4900 Sheriff rd. ne., was fined $50 yesterday in Municipal Court by Judge Thomas D. Quinn who found him guilty of violating last Friday's air-raid test.

Police said they noticed a light burning on the project during the test but couldn't identify its location. Defense Attorney Harry Ryan said he would appeal the fine because the light was never definitely located.

D. C. Officers Meet With Park Group

Cooperation Is Pledged; Plans Forwarded for Improvements

Postwar planning and closer cooperation between the District government and the National Parks and Planning Commission were the major issues in a joint meeting between the two bodies held at the Department of the Interior yesterday.

The Commissioners expressed their approval of the acquisition of playground sites, especially in congested areas undertaken by the Federal agency. Also approved was the postwar construction of a Washington "Yale Bowl" in the area immediately north of the Armory which is known as the East Capitol st. recreation area.

The Commissioners also suggested that the Park and Planning Commission, the Board of Education and themselves, begin at once to acquire sites for postwar construction of schools.

The Federal agency also approved the Commissioners' recommendation to change the names of 17th and 15th sts. south of K st. nw. to Connecticut and Vermont aves., respectively. It was pointed out, however, that it will need an act of Congress.

This was the first meeting between the present Board of Commissioners and the Planning Board. The hope was expressed that further meetings would be periodically scheduled.

Also discussed was the postwar construction of a bridge from Shepards Landing at Blue Plains across the Potomac to the northern section of Alexandria. Another major postwar project under discussion was the 18-mile "Fort to Fort" drive which will link all of the forts which surrounded Washington during the Civil War.

City News In Brief

Emanuel Baskin, proprietor of Baskin's Fur Store, 719 G st. nw., reported to police yesterday that thieves broke into the store's show window early yesterday morning and stole one fur coat, a fur jacket and a fur neckpiece, valued at $569.50.

This was the second time that furs had been reported stolen in the past two days. Wednesday, James Raffel, manager of the United Retail Cleaners and Tailors Association, 415 Neal pl. nw., reported to police that the building had been entered and six fur coats whose value was placed over $3000 were removed.

12 Refrigerators Stolen

Twelve electric refrigerators, valued at $108.50 each, were stolen yesterday from a Martin Construction Co. supply shed near a housing project, 2nd st. and Mississippi ave. se., William S. Pritchard, company superintendent, reported last night.

Editor Appointed

Hugh Russel Fraser of 1829 Summit pl. nw., has been appointed education editor of Pathfinder magazine, it was announced yesterday. Fraser, who attracted national attention some months ago when he conducted a survey of high school education for the New York Times, said that he will "turn the spotlight on the whole incredible drama of education."

Servicemen's Dance

The Hillel Club, Jewish coed club at George Washington University, will hold a dance for servicemen at the Washington Hebrew Congregation, 8th and I sts. nw., on Saturday from 9 to 12 p. m.

Seal Sales Chairman

Paul D. Sleeper, president of the District of Columbia Tuberculosis Association, last night announced that Brig. Gen. Frank K. Hines has accepted the appointment as Christmas Seal Sales Committee chairman for the District. General Hines is administrator of the Veterans' Bureau.

Clark Memorial

A memorial meeting, for the late Allen Culling Clark, will be held by the Columbia Historical Society at the Mayflower Hotel tonight at 8:15, according to Fred A. Emery, first vice president. Mr. Clark served the society as president from January, 1916, to May of this year. Tonight's meeting is the 329th.

Papers Compete In Tuberculosis School Contest

Washington school paper editors were asked yesterday to submit material dealing with the wartime role of the Christmas Seal of the National Tuberculosis Association printed during 1943, as part of a national contest for school papers.

Certificates of honor are to be awarded by the association and the Columbia Scholastic Press.

The District of Columbia Tuberculosis Association is providing two cash prizes for the two best papers submitted on each school level in Divisions 1 to 9, and Divisions 10 to 13.

Judges here are Ralph Mathews, Washington editor of the Afro-American; Dr. K. Albert Harden, chairman of the Tuberculosis Committee of the Medico-Chirurgical Society, and Merlo Pusey, Washington Post columnist.

Long Missing Government Girl Was in Hospital for Operation

Trinie Saavedria, 18-year-old Census Bureau typist, whose disappearance last Thursday started a search in Prince Georges and Washington, was a patient in Emergency Hospital until 4:20 p. m., yesterday, it was learned last night.

She underwent an operation for appendicitis a week ago yesterday, police reported, and was released to return to her room at Suitland Hall, a Government girl dormitory, yesterday afternoon.

Miss Saavedria

The doctor who performed the operation identified her photograph for police a short time before she returned to her room.

Detective John Apostolides last night said he had checked Emergency Hospital to see if the girl was there on Tuesday and was told she was not. Every other hospital in town also was checked.

Hospital officials had no explanation for the failure of police to get the information about Miss Saavedria previously. Under-staffing and overcrowding may have caused misfiling or faulty registration, it was pointed out by persons who have had similar experiences in Washington hospitals in recent months.

FBI Bows Out

Although FBI agents had been seen at the scenes of search yesterday, before Miss Saavedria was disclosed to be at Emergency, the Federal Bureau of Investigation declined to admit that it ever was involved in the search.

Senator Chavez of New Mexico, a friend of the family, said last night that he had been in touch with Washington and Prince Georges County Police during the search. The girl's parents were notified immediately of her recovery, he added. The Associated Press later reported that she had telephoned her parents in Albuquerque that she was safe and recuperating.

Miss Saavedria, pretty black-haired New Mexican, came to Washington September 2. She first complained of being ill last Thursday morning. She told her supervisor she intended to go to the infirmary.

She was reported missing Friday after she failed to report for work. A check revealed she had not appeared at the infirmary and the search was on.

Carmen Amaya, Dancing Aides Perform in Flamenco Style

By Ray C. B. Brown

C. C. Cappel presents Carmen Amaya on Thursday night in Constitution Hall. Assisting dancers: Leonor Amaya, Gloria Belmonte, Dorita, Valero, Paco Amaya, Jose Amaya and Geronimo Villarino. Pianist: Raymond Sachse. Guitarist: Sabicas.

Against the background of pale-hued colonial tapestry on the stage of Constitution Hall the vivid colors of gypsy costumes flashed and whirled last evening when Carmen Amaya and her supporting troupe of dancers entertained a large assemblage of spectators. It was a demonstrative house that watched and applauded the program of group, duo and solo dancing, mostly in the flamenco style, and it was a house which showed, by the special fervor of applause directed at the star, that it would have liked more than the three solo numbers she offered. For the personality of Carmen Amaya dominated the program, however well her associates seconded her.

Technically and temperamentally, the company was very satisfying, and the one thing lacking in the flamenco atmosphere was a battery of guitars in place of the piano. The inadequacy of that percussive and equal tempered instrument was particulaly noticeable in the accompaniment to Senorita Amaya's dancing of Albenitz' "Triana." In form she made it a stylized recital dance, but the vitality that broke through the stylization was so startling in its rhythmic surprises, so intensely improvisatory in the swift changes of pace that the music needed the piquancy of half-tones and the subleties of string phrasing. The piano could not begin to match the incisiveness of her attack, the fire of her temperament or the diablerie of her humor.

What we watched last evening was a phase in the development of a dancer who has discarded some of the mannerisms that first distinguished her and is learning how to utilize her talent. Her youth is a factor that will aid her to become a great dancer. That she is already an extraordinary one was evident in her "Ay que tu" number, a combination of pantomime, singing and dancing. Wearing the typical flamenco dress with tiers of flounces and a long train, she impersonated a gypsy girl taunting her lover: "You can't make me jealous. You pretend to make love to others, but you always come back to me and say—there's only you, beautiful."

Her small and hoarse voice, her angular and abrupt gestures, her fierce yet timid defiance made a portrait of a slum girl barely in her teens. It was a remarkable union of realism and comedy, an admirable and convincing piece of characterization. Other dances disclosed that the basis of her technical skill is the lithe and pantherine grace of her body, which has a rippling musculatura that makes some of her movements flow.

General Frink Again Promoted; Started as Private

A Washingtonian who entered the Army as a private in 1906 and is today commanding general of the Service of Supply for the American forces in the Southwest Pacific area, Brig. Gen. J. L. Frink has been awarded another promotion—with the rank of major general.

A Regular Army man, with the exception of two years which he spent in private business after the first World War, Major General Frink, whose home is at 2230 California st. nw., has a son and three sons-in-law also serving in the Army.

During the last war he was an infantry and General Staff officer at Service of Supply Headquarters, and was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal for his work.

McCann Heads Division toPromote War Bond Sales

Robert C. McCann, vice president of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., has been named chairman of the payroll savings division, District of Columbia War Finance Committee, it was announced yesterday by John A. Reilly, chairman of the commitee.

The payroll savings division was formed to promote a greater participation in the Government's program of war financing through the medium of payroll saving plans for the purchase of war bonds.

McCann is a member of the Washington Board of Trade, the United States Chamber of Commerce and is a director of the Catholic Charities of Washington. He is a graduate of Georgetown University and is national secretary of the board of governors of the alumni association.

Uncontested Divorces Settled As Quickly as Court Marriages

By Joseph Paull

Post Staff Writer

Trial of an uncontested divorce suit in the District Court takes just about as long nowadays as a court marriage ceremony, an average of 10 minutes.

Yesterday 30 uncontested divorce cases were heard. The Marriage License Bureau recorded only 39 applications.

Such was the day's comparison of two of Washington's most accelerated activities, although requirements for neither have been relaxed. Within a few weeks, when all uncontested divorce suits have been heard, the daily number of divorces is expected to decrease, court attaches say.

The scene in Justice M. Proctor's court was not pretty yesterday, with a packed courtroom of estranged men and women and the lawyers and witnesses needed for the hearings.

The justice adjudged each case on its merits, but with no contests the time needed was short.

A 40-year-old woman, wife of a taxi driver, briefly gave her name and address. She said she had two childdren and a husband she hasn't lived with since he deserted her three years ago. At that time, she said, she supported him as well as herself. A witness, who lives in the same house, testified she had never seen the husband there. The lawyer explained $10 a week for support had been agreed to by both parties. The divorce was granted.

Just then a man who was to be a witness in another case fell to the floor of the corridor outside the courtroom. He was taken to the marshal's office and declared dead from a heart attack. He was Grant C. Thompson, 32, a printer, of 1813 S st. se.

In the courtroom the cases continue.

A 19-year-old girl testified she married her husband when she was 16, and that he deserted her a month later. Her father testified he never gave consent to the marriage and that the daughter hasn't seen her husband for more than two years. The justice reserved decision and will investigate.

The grounds for divorce here are adultery, voluntary five-year separation, desertion, cruelty, and conviction of a felony charge involving moral turpitude in which two years is served in the penitentiary.

Some judges demand that divorces be filed at least six months before a hearing. Others will hear them sooner. A divorce decree is not final until six months after it is granted.

In contested suits, five months or more elapse before a decree is granted. But these cases number only one-fourth of the total, which was 1900 last year.

Gallinger Overhauling Plan Adopted

Cost of Mason's Program Put at $250,000; To Seek Lanham Act Funds

Following approval yesterday by the District Commissioners of Commissioner Guy Mason's plan for overhauling the administration of Gallinger Municipal Hospital it was indicated Lanham Act funds would be requested to pay for most of the program.

It was estimated the program would cost approximately $250,000 and this would include construction of a new laundry building, kitchen and laundry equipment and personnel costs.

Specific Provisions

The approved plan was as follows:

1. Employment of a deputy superintendent, a doctor, with administrative hospital experience.

2. Employment of an assistant superintendent to be in charge of the administrative work; the applicant to have engineering training and hospital experience.

3. Construction of a temporary building to house the laundry with the present laundry building used for added kitchen facilities.

4. Appointment of a survey board which would examine patients who have been in Gallinger two months or more.

5. Inspection of all District operated hospitals at least once each three weeks.

At the same time the Commissioners instructed Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, superintendent of Gallinger, to submit a list of employes who should be on a 48-hour week. Dr. Bocock said these names would include most of the Gallinger employes with the exception of clerical help and some administration employes.

Patient Transfer Under Way

Bocock also said the transfer of 74 tuberculosis patients, formerly housed in the old wooden buildings which date back to Civil War days, is in progress. The patients are being sent to the new tuberculosis ward at Gallinger or to Glenn Dale Sanitarium.

Engineer Commissioner Charles W. Kutz said he would order demolition of the buildings as soon as the transfer was completed.

Walter L. Fowler, District budget officer, said the two top administrative positions, proposed in the Mason plan, would cost approximately $6500 a year each. He said that total increased administrative costs would amount to approximately $20,000.

Mason Record In Gallinger Job Defended

Commissioner Guy Mason, currently under fire by Gallinger Hospital investigating Senators, was warmly defended by O. K. Fike, member of Maryland-District of Columbia Hospital Association, in a statement opening a two-day meeting of the group in the Washington Hotel yesterday.

"Far from being negligent in his duties with regard to Gallinger, Commissioner Mason has always had the interest of the community at heart and, in face of a general hospital situation aggravated by war problems, has done a consistently fine job," said Fike.

Mason said that most attacks on Gallinger could well have been made on other hospitals.

The attacks, however, must not disregard the emergency conditions under which hospitals are forced to operate with handicaps in virtually every branch of activity.

Surgeon General Parran of the United States Public Health Service, will speak to the session on "Public Health of Tomorrow" at 12:30 p. m. today in the Hall of Nations of the hotel.

Interesting highlight of the afternoon will be a talk at 2:45 p. m. on "New Social Security Legislation" by Claude W. Munger, chairman of the Council on Government Relations of the American Hospital Association.

Vocal Entertainer For Presidents Sings for Blind

It was definitely a "mixed" quartet that sang for the District of Columbia Association of Workers for the Blind last night at Epiphany Church's parish house.

George H. O'Connor, insurance executive, who has entertained Presidents since the days of McKinley, was singing one of a series of songs when even the seeing-eye dogs joined in the chorus.

O'Connor indulged in his well known wit as well as song. He told the workers that he received a letter after one of his broadcasts that read, "Haven't heard you since Lincoln was shot."

Reminiscing, O'Connor recalled singing, "Cohen Owes Me $97," at a party given by the usually solemn President Coolidge. A Jewish guest rose and hissed, whereupon the President quickly said, "Is that Cohen?"

O'Connor left his audience with the song, "Hooligan's Fancy Dress Ball," one he had sung for President Taft many years ago.

Market Report

The first coconuts from Jamaica have arrived on the Washington wholesale market, according to the War Food Administration. Tops in quality and quantity are tomatoes, potatoes, squash and the greens—all low priced. Moderate supplies of green cabbage which have come up from North Carolina are another good buy.

Plentiful—White potatoes sweet potatoes, squash, tomatoes, spinach, kale, collards, turnip greens, mustard greens, turnips, rutabaga, cauliflower, beets, onions, peppers, limes, lemons and Western grapes.

Moderate—Cabbage, carrots, parsnips, parsley, lettuce, broccoli, mushrooms, celery, avocados, honeydew melons and green beans.

Handle With Care

Keep canned foods in a dry place to prevent rusting through of the can. Don't store them near heat or where they will freeze. Retain the gentle touch in handling, or contents may be damaged.

Skin-Deep Beauty

By Margaret George

What's a woman to do? There are wonderful creams, lotions, oils spread over the cosmetic counters. New ones, professing to be even better than the old, are constantly appearing. How shall you know which are right for your skin?

We believe in cleanliness, first off, healthy circulation; secondly, and skin protection, thirdly. How you achieve these three prerequisites to skin beauty is another matter.

We found one very fine way the other day . . . with these three fundamentals neatly packaged in a convenient set. You'll find that you can give yourself one of the quickest and most effective skin-care treatments you've ever discovered. (That's what we found out, at any rate.)

There's a bottle of soil-adsorbing (sic) oils, which is light and fluffy, something like whipped cream in texture. And that's the way it feels on your face. You pat it on gently—no heavy massaging and rubbing. This company believes rubbing creams into your face only embeds soil particles deeper into your pores. This soil-adsorbing stuff kind of penetrates down of its own account, and when you wipe it off with a tissue you'll see what unsuspected soil hoarding you were guilty of.

Then there's a bottle containing a lotion which is similar in texture to the fluid soil-adsorbing. It's called "Blushing," and rightly so, since after applying it, you'll find a warm glow spreading over your skin. This is designed to increase blood circulation, which is responsible for feeding your skin. If your skin is fairly normal, you'll use "Blushing" sparingly (and normal skin means skin with healthy circulation). If your skin is sallow, blemished with blackheads, whiteheads and the like, "Blushing" will eventually take care of it.

You next have a lotion, agreeably scented, which you use to remove the least trace of oils from your skin. It's wonderfully cool and refreshing. And after it's use your skin is immaculate.

The protection part of your skin-care routine is managed by "Complexion Dress." You spread a little portion, about the size of a dime, in your palms, rub it between your hands, and then smooth it over your face. It goes on leaving no sign of it's having been there, except for the soft feel of your skin.

If this sounds like an elaborate routine, then it's the fault of the telling. It takes so little time. There's a chart that comes with the introductory set which tells you how to use it, and the time it takes to apply these fluid products could be measured in a thimble.

There are some other products put out by this company which we haven't tried, but if they're as good as these basics, we're for them—things like a night cream (to be used only if your skin needs it), face powder, rouge, and lipstick.

The department store which carries these products, uses them in their beauty salon, and have been using them year after year with fine results. Now they have a bar with the products bottled for your home use. For under $2 you can get an introductory set, complete with all the items mentioned above (except for the powder and rouges).

It's our guess that the introduction will blossom into a long and enduring friendship.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Any mother dislikes, with good reason, the necessity to get up in a cold house and change the baby and sometimes the whole bed so the baby may go on sleeping comfortably the rest of the night.

One difficulty seems to be that mothers do not diaper their sleeping babies adequately. A diaper should be folded so there are at least six thicknesses of material in front, for a boy baby, in back for a girl baby.

In addition, there should be some sort of night diaper which provides extra material for absorption so the baby need not be changed except at the one regular night feeding, unless he wakens and fusses. This one feeding usually is enough at three months or even before, so two changings would be necessary for only a very short time when baby is so small it is wise to let him sleep in a fairly warm room.

The night-time "soaker" is the usual extra protection provided for the baby. These soakers still can be bought in baby departments or they can be made very easily at home. The most familiar type is knitted of rather fine, white woolen yarn into what looks like a little pair of panties with a draw string at the waist. They should be amply large, as they will shrink after repeated washings. These go over the regulation white diaper and because they are all wool they hold a lot of moisture without becoming drippy and they keep the baby warm.

It is necessary to have several of these, as they dry slowly. Because they cannot be boiled they need careful washing with mild soap suds and should be rinsed in tepid water and dried, if possible, in the sun. Occasionally rinse them in boric acid water.

The baby can be freshly diapered following the last feeding of the night—at 10 or 12—and then left undisturbed until his early morning feeding. Because he is warm and the wetness does not spread, he will be comfortable and will sleep more soundly because no one uncovers him to put on a dry, but cold diaper.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

Quite a few of you have to be shown what exercise will do before you can get up any enthusiasm for it. For quick changes, go to work on your waistline. The amazing improvement you can see within one week should make you eager to buckle down.

Set aside just five minutes a day for these special exercises. But don't rump through your workout and call it "special." You have to put every second of that time on toning those particular muscles. One of the main conditions is to keep the other parts of the figure out of a specific exercise. That means the neighboring muscles must be either relaxed or held rigid.

Exercising on the floor makes it easier to keep those two rules in mind. For a waistline that cuts down the surplus inches in no time flat, do this: Lie on your back on the floor and flex your knees so that they are up over your chest, feet clear of the floor. Keep your upper back muscles relaxed and back flat on the floor and roll sideward from the waist to rest hip and thigh on the floor. In doing this, move the legs as a unit. Hold for a second, return to starting position, and roll to other side.

From the same starting position, on your back with knees flexed and feet held off floor, you can stretch off the inches. First, roll the hips to the side, then shoot both legs straight out and swing them down, not quite to a straight line, then start the upswing, flex, and come back to your starting position.

You can tell by the feel of these exercises whether or not your are really getting at the waistline muscles. If you keep your back flat on the floor as you roll the hips sideward, you will feel a strong tug on the waist muscles on the opposite side. In shooting the legs out and down, you add a stretch to the twist and increase the pull on these muscles. Go easy. If your muscles are soft, these exercises are tougher than you may realize at the time. Alternate sides and relax in between with knees flexed, feet on floor.

Another good exercise is to sit on floor, legs widely separated, knees straight to hold hips firmly anchored. From there, reach both arms overhead and stretch through the midsection. Keep this midriff stretch and either rotate the trunk at the waist or simply bend sharply sideward.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

How to Be Free In a Crowd

Among the things British women want in the postwar world are detached houses and cottages with gardens. They are emphatically against flats, as was revealed in a recent survey.

Many British young people, another survey showed, believe in a planned economy as necessary to prevent unemployment, but are most decidedly against having any personal planning done on them. Meantime, in the United States, authors who have been analyzing the American character list a fierce love of personal independence high among national traits.

That is no news to anyone who has ever heard the theme song of young America," I want to live my own life." One illustration of this feeling, as Margaret Mead, anthropologist, points out in her book, "And Keep Your Powder Dry," is the custom of young people in this country to leave home and go far afield to make their fortunes, also the custom of young married couples to go to other neighborhoods, other States, far from tribal background and supervision, to make their homes.

The English and the Americans have long been that way about their private lives. Some of them might go so far as to subscribe to the thesis recently set forth by a young Russian-born American, Ayn Rand, in her 400,000-word book, "The Fountainhead." Her philosophy she summarizes as, "Civilization is the progress toward a society of privacy."

But—here is the shrinking world causing us to rub elbows more closely with everybody. Here is the drift toward cooperation and group action. Here is the increase in population, the growth of cities, the developing complexities of life which make people more and more interdependent. Here is our industrial civilization, which scrambles and coagulates humans in their working hours. Here is the longer span of life and the two and three generation household. Here are community kitchens and nurseries and cooperative apartments.

How are we to live and work continually with other human beings and not have them in our hair? How are we as the open spaces of the world recede to preserve our privacy?

That is one of the arts of democracy that many of us have yet to learn. It is, of course, based on a true and deep-seated respect for the individual whether that individual be a husband, wife, child, parent, neighbor, or fellow workman. It is based on a careful respect for his variations in personality and views and aspirations, no matter how far removed they be from our own. A hoouse may be full of people, a factory or office may be jammed with them, and all may still be inwardly free if they are sufficiently civilized, as the saying goes, to "stay out of each others' lives."

Strangely enough personal freedom has steadily been increasing as life has become more crowded and complex. We are definitely rid of the "heavy father" who held his children's fate in his hands. The domineering and the clinging mother are both being put in their place. Clergy, teachers, squires, political bosses, ladies of the manor house, dowagers, the village rich men do not have the dictation in people's personal lives they once possessed.

The fundamental need of human privacy is being more generally recognized. We have come a long way since Jane Austen wrote her novels in the family parlor. We have also come a long way since people's beliefs and opinions were considered subject to censure by family, friends, neighbors, even the town. But we still have a long way to go to reach that complete delicate consideration for the minds and souls of all those with whom we are associated that should mark the sincere democrat.

Decorative Tiles Enhance Beauty of Modern Homes

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

In today's pleasant homes tiles are used for facings of fireplaces, for sunroom floors, for fountains and pools, for front stoops, for ornamental insets in plaster walls. Nonstructural ways include their use as stands for teapots, for mirror frames, for table tops. And there are many other provocative ways that they will doubtless be adapted in after-the-war days. Tile stoves are already in prospect for this fall, and from the plain functional model to be offered as a wartime utility for keeping warm, it's just one more step to decorative tile stoves. And certainly we can look forward to taking that ornamental step when peace comes. For there are many beautiful old tile stoves to inspire our artists.

Tile roofs also are a challenging idea, not just the plain red or green tiles we're accustomed to seeing—but what about the brilliant variety of the glazed tile roofs of Peking as an idea for versatile architecture of the future? Golden yellow tiles, turquoise blue tiles, all shades of green and many deeper blues makes the roofs of Peking one of the dramatic beauties of the city.

Continental Congress in New York City next April—yes or no? That is one of the problems to be passed on today by the members of the National Board, State Regents, National Committee chairman of the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution, in an all-day session of the group in Memorial Continental Hall.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl, 17, in Her Third Year at Prep School, Has Suddenly Lost Interest in Education; She Wants to Get a Job and Help Win the War

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I read your column every day and I thought maybe you could help me. I have been going to a prep school for college, far away from home. This makes my third year. Up to this year, I thought it was wonderful, but now it's changed. I no longer want to go there. I want to get a job and work to help win the war. So many of my friends are doing that.

Ever since I can remember, I have wanted to be a nurse. I thought about joining up with the Cadet Nurses or some Red Cross organization. Could you give me any names of such jobs, or something that young people are needed in? I am home now for a while; really until the last of this week, and I would like your help very much. When I was a baby, my mother died and I was adopted. They have been very nice to me; but their ideas are very old. I want to work. The boy I go with is fighting and I want to help.

Do you know of any jobs a person 17 can do? I would like to get in a hospital and work. This summer I worked in a hospital in Washington as a nurses' aid. I would like to go to Walter Reed. I was there this summer several times. Please answer as soon as possible.

WORRIED.

DEAR WORRIED: Your idea of wanting to quit school this year and get a job and work to help win the war is not at all sound. There are two major reasons why you should discard the idea, and continue with your prep school studies for at least another year. The first reason,—of a general nature, and weighty enough in itself to dictate a decision to remain in school,—is that you plainly need more schooling than you have absorbed up to now, to make you even a passably well-educated high school girl, now in her Junior year. Your foregoing letter is a very poor example of English composition, for a girl your age, with your educational opportunities; and had it been presented as a test paper in a class examination,—say, to test your ability to write a business letter, or letter of application for a job,—I should think it would have been graded with a failure mark. Indeed, it would hardly do credit to a 12-year-old; for I occasionally receive letters from children that age who, in offhand manner, do a much more organized job of expressing themselves in writing. And the faculty (always a trained faculty) of speaking and writing to the point is the accepted criterion of individual intelligence, or potential social competence. Without that trained faculty, you could not go far in any business or profession. Which means that at present you are as ill qualified to fill a job significant to the war effort as the average eighth-grader would be.

Two Impressive Reasons For Sticking to Study

The second reason for staying in school is quite specific; and should be even more impressive, from your viewpoint. That reason is,—You have set your heart on being a nurse; and you will not be eligible for acceptance by any accredited School of Nursing until you have completed a high school course of study, and have a diploma to show for it. For verification of this statement, talk to Mrs. Elizabeth Coleman, chairman of the Committee on Recruitment of Student Nurses, D. C., Nursing Council for War Service. Telephone NAtional 2149. Office address: Apt. 60, 1746 K Street Northwest, Washington, D. C.

Slant Your Education Toward Desired Goal

As a matter of fact, since you hope to be a nurse, you ought to talk with Mrs. Coleman before settling down to your general studies in the year ahead,—so that you will know what courses to choose, leading to "required credits" for the student of nursing. Or so that you can lay plans to change schools, if such should be necessary to slant your preliminary education toward the nursing profession. Mrs. Coleman tells me, for instance, that the candidate for nurse's training must have (1) high school education or its equivalent; and (2) such required credits as two years' science, history and mathematics; four years' English; and, in some States, though not in the District of Columbia, at least two years' schooling in a foreign language. With this much education, you would be eligible to enlist in the Cadet Nurse Corps, created to meet the war emergency, and operating under auspices of the U. S. Public Health Service,—which recruits nurses for military service, giving them an accelerated two-and-one-half-years' course of study, and six months' additional training in a large civilian or Government hospital, which leads to the professional status of registered nurse, and the military rank of second lieutenant.

As an alternative to the Cadet Nurse Corps training (which has the advantage of being Federally financed), you may enter a School of Nursing either for the three-year course leading to R. N. certification; or the four-and-one-half-years' course, leading to a Bachelor of Science degree in nursing,—in this event paying your own tuition, of course. Among foremost institutions in the Eastern area offering courses of nurses' training leading to college degrees are: Providence Hospital in Washington, D. C.; Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore; Presbyterian Hospital in New York City; Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston; and the University of Pennsylvania School of Nursing. A tremendous expansion in the public health program, both here and abroad, is anticipated in the postwar period, which will be accompanied by an unprecedented demand for the services of nurses having B. S. degrees, and will afford them unexcelled opportunities to advance to positions of special responsibility as administrators, executives and educators in their profession. So there again is the conclusive argument in favor of getting your education now,—in the appropriate season.

Armour Ideas Make the Most of Meat

Men like Bacon and Cabbage...Hearty Dish!

Haven't you heard men rave over corned beef and cabbage? Well, just let the man of your house try this delicious bacon and cabbage dish! It's wonderfully full of flavor. It's hearty and satisfying. It's the dish that gives that "well-fed" feeling . . . yet it takes less than one meat-point per serving.

It's so point-thrifty because it's made with Armour's Star Bacon . . . the rich, mild bacon that is sugar-cured in its own juices' . . . then slow-smoked over fragrant hickory and hardwood fires. So flavorful that its fine meat flavor extends through all the cabbage . . . makes just a little go a long way. And in this bacon and cabbage dish you need no butter (another point saving).

To prepare the dish, fry 4 or more slices of Star Bacon slowly until crisp. Remove slices. Add 2 tbsps. sugar and 2 tbsps. flour to bacon fat. Blend. Add ½ cup water and ½ cup vinegar gradually. Cook and stir until thick. Season. Cook cabbage in boiling water for 5 minutes. Drain. Pour sweet-sour sauce over cabbage. To serve, place crisp bacon slices on top of cabbage. Serves 4.

Appetizing Meat Alternate Furnished By Nutritious, Point-Free Soybean

You meet the soybean at the very best tables. It's rather a miracle food. Anyone who has given this legume a chance applauds it for the nutritious mouth-watering creations which can be made from it.

The soybean is an inexpensive and valuable protein food. This makes it a splendid alternate food for meat. If there is any food for which we are seeking an alternate, it is meat. This we all realize when we try to stretch our meat points.

There are many interesting facts about soybeans. In China the soybean has been used as a food for 5000 years. We have cultivated it for about 20 years in the United States, using it mostly in meal as feed for livestock or in the manufacture of paints and plastics.

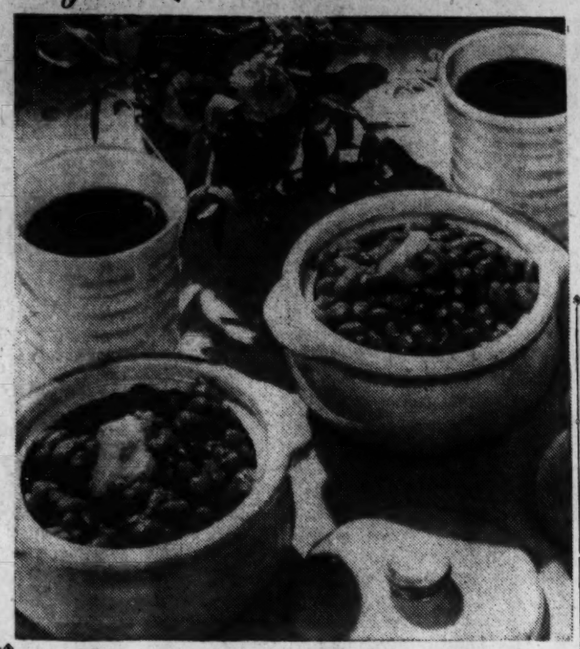
One of the most remarkable things about the soybean is that it can be dried, kept for a year and then the dried bean can be sprouted and become a food with all the splendid qualities of the bean, and the virtues of a fresh vegetable. The soybean can easily be sprouted in the home.

It took too many years for this worthy food to land on the American table, but now that it has proved itself all kinds of delicious foods are being made from it.

Bread made from soybean flour claims 12 times more calcium than is found in even the newly enriched white loaf. It contains 40 per cent protein and of protein that is more digestible than the regular white bread loaf. It has 28 per cent less starch. Soy flour is rich in fat, yet bread made with soy flour is called non-fattening because of the peculiar quality of its lecithin and oil, which enables the body to utilize these in the organs and tissues, instead of storing them away as fat deposits. It is the high percentage of fat in the flour which gives the bread its excellent keeping qualities.

How can you use the soybean? Well it can be used to make a delicious loaf food. Combining it with meat or vegetables. Muffins and rolls can be made from the soy flour. Tossed green salad can be made from the soy sprouts. And a dessert such as ginger bread can be sprinkled with toasted soy grits. Soy grits have innumerable uses. The grits are the meal of the bean and similar to cornmeal in color, size and granule. The grits can be used to stretch meat loaves and croquettes. Grits can be made into mush that may be sliced and fried to a delicious crispness. The mush formula is two parts soy grits to one part cornmeal. It is cooked like the well-known mush, then allowed to stand so it can be sliced for frying.

Dried soybeans may be substituted for other dried beans, navy, pea, lima, etc. The dried soybeans when soaked and cooked will about double in bulk. Soak them in water for 12 hours, then boil them in fresh salted water until tender—about 3 hours. Bacon, salt pork and onion may be added for the last hour of cooking.



Every cook is improvising these days. She won't overlook the many possibilities of soybeans if she is wise. For those cooks who do not know how to prepare them into appealing, appetizing dishes, the following receipes are given:

SOYBEAN LOAF

Put through a grinder or mash ½ pound dried beans, cooked. Add and mix well: 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ green pepper, seeded and chopped; ½ cup tomato pulp, ½ cup corn flakes, 1 onion, chopped; ¼ teaspoon pepper, 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, 1 teaspoon horseradish sauce and 1 beaten egg. Bake these ingredients in a greased loaf pan in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) about 1 hour. Serve with cheese or tomato sauce.

SOYBEAN SOUFFLE

Put through a ricer or food mill enough cooked soybeans to make 2 cupsful of pulp. Add: 2 teaspoons chopped onion, 3 beaten egg yolks, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 2 tablespoons chopped parsley or other herb. Whip 3 egg whites until stiff and fold in. Bake in a slow oven (325 degrees F.) about 1 hour. Serves four.

If you want to roast cooked soybeans to use along with cocktails, treat them this way: Spread them in a shallow greased pan. Dot them with butter or margarine or cooking oil. Roast them in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, until brown or brown them in deep fat.

If you don't know where to secure soybean products, call NAtional 4200, Ext. 324, between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m.

Wartime hospitality is possible if you cook soybeans baked to tenderness. Soybeans require longer baking than white beans, but you can use your favorite baked bean recipe. Soak the beans 12 hours before cooking, then bake for 8 to 10 hours.

Made with DUFF'S ... a treat that makes a party of the plainest meal. For variety, fold raisins into the batter before baking.

Just ADD WATER-that's all!

Mrs. Breckinridge Long Wins Red Cross Certificate as Aide

Mrs. George Garrett Addresses Large Class Which Also Includes Mrs. Virginia Jenckes

Mrs. Breckinridge Long, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State; Mrs. Maynard B. Barnes and Mrs. Herbert F. Corn are the proud possessors of dietitian aide certificates, awarded to them last evening when the first class of such aides attended graduation exercises in the parlor of the Nurse's Home of Emergency Hospital.

Mrs. George Angus Garrett, chairman of the Volunteer Special Services for the District Chapter of the American Red Cross, addressed the new graduates, and Mrs. Harvey B. Bolton presented the diplomas. Most of the 41 graduates have been working in Washington hospitals since last spring, but formal graduation exercises were postponed until 30 had finished their training.

The Dietitian's Aide Corps is a comparatively new project and was first organized in Washington and Baltimore. So successful has it proved in these cities that similar courses have been started in every large chapter in the country.

Aides Perform Multitude of Duties

Dietitian's aides assist professional dietitians in Washington's overcrowded hospitals, arranging trays, measuring special diets, checking food deliveries and serving meals. Dressed in their trim, commando-blue seersucker uniforms, Dietitian's aides have taken their place with the nurse's aides as a welcome addition to the understaffed personnel of the hospitals. Starting out in one hospital, they are now at work in six—George Washington, Children's, Emergency, Episcopal, Garfield and Casualty.

Like their more famous sisters, the nurse's aides, the dietitian's aides volunteer at least 150 hours a year. Before taking the course, they must have a Red Cross nutrition certificate or its equivalent. In addition to their theoretical training, the prospective dietitian's aides undergo a rigorous 60-hour training under the supervision of a professional dietitian at a hospital.

Mrs. Edward Cassedy In Class of Forty-one

Among those in the graduating class last evening were Mrs. Meyer Astrin, Mrs. Arthur Ballou, Miss Ann Barr, Mrs. Philip Bridges, Mrs. H. C. Moorman, Mrs. John E. Rieben, Mrs. James Romey, Mrs. Elroy G. Smith, Mrs. H. E. Burke, Mrs. Norman Deuhring, Mrs. D. A. Fitzgerald, Mrs. Edward Cassedy, Miss Karalina Hedler, Mrs. F. L. Gunderson, Mrs. T. W. Howard, Mrs. Marie Kipp, Mrs. Richard G. Kelleher, Miss Renetta Wertz, Mrs. Marie Wetzel, Mrs. J. M. Murphy and Mrs. Edwin F. Bilo.

Others included Mrs. M. B. Petit, Mrs. Alta Ambrose, Mrs. Howard Protheroe, Mrs. Edgar F. Shilts, Mrs. Francis Duehay, Mrs. Florence Smith, Mrs. Hugh S. Harstin, Mrs. Harold Sinton, Mrs. S. P. Hayes, Mrs. W. D. Termahlen, Mrs. Virginia Jenckes,, Mrs. John R. Todd, Mrs. J. Melvin Miller. Mrs. N. A. Townsend, Mrs. John J. Mahoney, Mrs. Gladys E. Weeks and Mrs. Charles M. Weyand.

What's in a Name, Anyway?

"It should have been named 'Arizona,'" is what former Senator Henry F. Ashurst might have been saying when he met Maury Maverick between acts of a recent performance of 'Oklahoma.' "But I say it should be called "Texas,'" would be the answer of the former Representative from that State. At any rate, both agreed it's a grand show under any name

Former Envoy To Russia Returns to D. C

Seven acres of avocados and orange trees in La Mesa, Calif., is the only reason that Mrs. William H. Standley might have to cut short her stay in Washington.

Admiral Standley, former Ambassador to the Soviet Union, and Mrs. Standley arrived in Washington Tuesday by plane from their home in California and are at the Mayflower while the admiral winds up official business connected with the United States Embassy in Moscow, to which he so recently bade farewell.

"Everything is very indefinite now," said Mrs. Standley, "I really haven't any idea how long it will take. But if I find the admiral must be here for some time, then I shall have to go home to look after my ranch. The avocados are just beginning to ripen, and although I have little more than a dozen orange trees, they, too, are coming along now."

As a former Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral Standley and his wife lived in the big, rambling house on Observatory Hill and made many friends here then. Yet only the closest of these are apt to see anything of the Standleys on this visit. Invitations to parties—that is, large and formal ones—are most likely to be "regretted," for Mrs. Standley says her husband is too busy and "I came here for a rest."

This is a reunion, too, for the former Ambassador and his wife. It was nine months ago that they said goodby, the Ambassador heading for Russia and Mrs. Standley for La Mesa to keep the home fires burning until her husband's return.

Arriving in this country on September 24, the admiral spent several days in Washington before going on to the West Coast.

About Washington . . .

THE POSITION OF Finland in regard to this country, as well as other of the United Nations, may grow more precarious by the day . . . but a tribute to the high, personal regard many Washingtonians have for the Minister of Finland and his attractive wife is evinced in every guest list for their dinners.

Finnish Minister

So long as diplomatic relations remain as they are, top-rank officialdom and persons who have been friends with the able and onetime most popular man in the foreign corps will continue to accept invitations to the Legation of Finland.

He and his English-born wife are superb hosts. They have a flair for choosing congenial guests and for making each one feel his presence is highly important. At a dinner for 20 the other night, there was a Supreme Court Justice and his wife, an outstanding member of Congress, a State Department official, an internationally famous columnist, a political wizard and several members of residential society who have been frequent callers at the Finnish Legation for a number of years.

Not one to waste a moment's time where his country's business is concerned, the Minister was no sooner seated than he asked the woman to his right—wife of the Supreme Court Justice—how she felt about his country's position in the current conflict.

"I don't really know much about it," she said politely. "All I know is what I hear . . . and read."

"And just what do you hear?" he asked. "Please tell me."

"Well, to be quite frank—what I hear is that your country is an ally of Germany."

"That," replied the envoy emphatically. "is not true. My country is simply trying to protect itself against a much greater enemy!"

There the conversation stopped; then turned presently into a lighter vein; but before the party was over, the Minister had found occasion for a brief, intimate and earnest talk with the member of Congress, the columnist and the political wizard.

REPUTED TO BE one of his country's ablest statesmen long before he came to Washington, Minister Procope has borne out that idea with every move he has made in America. Remember how . . . back in those early days of war when Russia invaded his valiant little country . . . American sentiment went overboard in sympathy for his country and devotion to him? Remember, even further back than that, when he first came to Washington and was forthwith besieged by the most overwhelming display of feminine attention ever to swirl around any man since Edward of England, then Prince of Wales, made his historic visit here?

Envoy Procope handled that delicate situation with enviable diplomatic tact. And while the flutter of feminine hearts subsided considerably when he married lovely Margaret Shaw of England, he had managed by that time to make many fast friends in America—friends who saw beneath the surface of his obvious glamour and charm, and realized that he was one of the most efficient and cleverest envoys in Washington.

Like other national capitals, Washington is accustomed to expending upon foreign envoys any displeasure it may feel toward the nations they represent. Japanese, German, Italian and Vichy French diplomats felt an increasing chill in the atmosphere long before actual disruption with their countries. Soviet diplomats likewise have felt it several times in the past. The Minister of Finland and his wife appear still to be as popular as ever—except, of course, with diplomats from countries already "at war" with Finland. Countless Washingtonians, including many high placed officials, are still hoping that somehow—and soon—mounting troubles between this country and Minister Procope's country may be solved. He also has high hopes in that direction, for he recently renewed the lease on his Woodland Drive residence—for two years and a half.

AT A SMALL, informal and completely off-the-record party late yesterday afternoon, I saw the Duke and Duchess of Windsor; talked with them briefly; observed them for quite a while as they met and chatted with several prominent Washingtonians . . . and came away in a glow, and with the feeling that at last I had discovered the secret of the Duchess" charm.

I think it lies in her vivacity; her manner of looking at you so directly, and of acting the entire time she talks with you as if you are the one person in whom she is most interested. She has a disarming smile, an infectious laugh, and an attentive way of hanging on every word you speak as if your every statement were an epigram. If there was ever any snobbery in her make-up—which I doubt—it's entirely missing now; and she seems to be interested in everything. In short, she spreads light and a certain sweetness all around her; and she's a mighty pleasant person to have about the place.

Duchess of Windsor

I don't believe anybody who has talked to her five minutes could keep from liking her. Not, anyway, if she's always as gracious and as entertaining as she was yesterday.

The two arrived at the party about 6 o'clock, the Duke just having come from a visit to Quantico. What did she wear? Well, let's see. She had on a trimly tailored suit of black twisted faille and a small calot fashioned of dusty pink and black taffeta. Dusty pink gloves, and a double strand of pearls around her neck were the only other accents I noted in her attractive ensemble. I'm sure she wore earrings but I don't remember which kind. I faintly recall that she also had on a diamond clip or two, but the truth of the matter is, I was far more impressed with her manner and her natural way of talking than with anything she wore.

It was a party I shall never forget . . . and I only wish I could divulge the name of the hostess. "You mustn't do it," she demanded. "All the people I couldn't invite would never forgive me." I'm sure she was right.

Orchids And Champagne at Benefit Here

Champagne and orchids, all for the benefit of the Stage Door Canteen fund, were the order of the day last evening at the fall opening of the Mayflower Lounge.

Transformed into a fairyland for the occasion, the Mayflower Lounge was banked with autumn blooms, and silken United States flags floated from standards on the wall all around the room. Add to this the fact that every woman was presented with a corsage of orchids as she entered the lounge and each couple was served champagne immediately upon reaching their tables, and you have a colorful occasion indeed.

Well represented for the occasion was diplomatic, governmental and official society; and two or three exceedingly important personages, though previously unannounced, were seen among the guests of the evening.

Cornelius Vanderbilt had reserved a table for eight, and others who attended included Maj. and Mrs. Brook Walker, Comdr. and Mrs. John A. Kennedy, Maj. and Mrs. Chapman Rose, Lieut. and Mrs. Eugene Catron, Mr. and Mrs. John T. Davis, Mrs. George Mesta, Mrs. George R. Holmes and Mrs. James Doolittle, former Senator Henry F. Mrs. P. W. Hiden Here From Virginia Honored at Tea

Mrs. Philip Wallace Hiden of Newport News, Va., who has done outstanding work in the restoration of early Virginia official records and is active in many genealogical organizations, was the guest of honor Wednesday afternoon at a reception given by Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins at her home on Kalorama rd. Other guests were members of the national society First Families of Virginia 1607-1619, of which Mrs. Hiden is registrar.

Mrs. Hodgkins was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Fred A. Wallis of Paris, Ky.; Mrs. Everett Robinson Todd, Mrs. Ida M. Shirk, Mrs. Bleeker Luce of Philadelphia, Miss Stella Pickett Hardy, Mrs. William A. Disque, Mrs. Virginia Armistead Nelson, Dr. Frances Moon Butts, Mrs. Charles J. Kappler, Mrs. Walter Taylor Campbell, Mrs. Thomas Hardie Seay and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Howard W. Hodgkins.

The presence of the hostess' grandson, young Wilcox Howard Hodgkins, added to the interest of the reception. A Marine, he has just returned from service in the South Pacific, where he was wounded in action and spent much time in a base hospital in New Zealand.

The method Mrs. Hiden follows in her restoration of records work is to visit courthouses and churches and select valuable Colonial records that from age and use are falling to pieces. Then she interests some individual or group or State or national organization in sponsoring the restoration.

Mrs. Hiden, the former Miss Martha Woodroof of Orange, Va., came up from Newport News on Tuesday to attend the national board meeting of the Association of Founders and Patriots and the Runnymede reception that afternoon at the D. A. R. Chapter House. She cut short her Washington visit and left immediately after Mrs. Hodgkins' reception for her mother's home in Orange to be with her young son, who telegraphed he would meet her there for a brief furlough before leaving for overseas duty.

Interest Will Be Piqued By Two of Today's Films

FILM ITEMS that may be said to touch the opposite extremes of public interest will be coming up in the downtown area today.

Despite the alleged antipathy said to be so widely felt toward "war pictures," "The City That Stopped Hitler—Heroic Stalingrad," half of the double bill opening today at the Metropolitan Theater, should engage the attention of every American who followed the tragic siege of that valorous Russian metropolis in the daily press. Especially is this true in view of the present conversations being held in Moscow by Secretary Hull, Anthony Eden and Foreign Commissar Molotov.

This film was made by Russian cameramen, eight of whom were killed in the battle zone, and is reported to be a terrifying, yet inspiring, pictorial document. In it are shown the full power of mechanized warfare and the desperate street and house-to-house fighting in which a courageous citizenry battled side by side with the military to repel the Hun.

One of its most significant intervals is devoted to the surrender of the Nazi General von Paulus and other high-ranking Hitler militarists, their arrogance and "superman" delusion thoroughly punctured. The picture reputedly reveals them as merely a glum and beaten group of gangsters.

Of a totally different nature will be the "Flicker Flashbacks" subject scheduled to go on view at the Trans-Lux. Here will be seen two once fabulous figures of the early days of the silent "movies"—David Wark Griffith and Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle. The excerpts from their films chosen for this short-reeler will reveal the sort of thing that first brought them into prominence and started them on their way to the top in their respective and sharply contrasted fields. It has always seemed to me that the man who gave the screen "The Birth of a Nation," "Intolerance." "Broken Blossoms" and "Hearts of the World" deserved to survive among the leaders of the motion picture industry, instead of being relegated to comparative obscurity 3000 miles from the scene of his productional triumphs.

A Diverting Stage Show Moves In

As of yesterday, a fresh note was struck at Loew's Capitol Theater by the presentation of the engaging new stage bill broken out to lend a new fillip to the second week's run of "I Dood It," on the screen.

Of particular note is the presence in the headline position of Wini Shaw, gifted singer of stage, screen and radio, just returned from 22 months of overseas appearances before the armed services, the last of which was with Jack Benny, Larry Adler and Anna Lee, in Africa, the Middle East, Sicily and Italy. As important as her rousing song numbers—including her celebrated "Lady in Red"—is the beautiful and dynamic Miss Shaw's brief appeal to supply our fighting men with everything they need to win, by the purchase of war bonds and stamps. She lends this unobtrustive plea the authority of an eye-witness account. Wini, as always, is a hit.

The bill is opened familiarly by Billy Wells and the Four Fays, a brother and sister comedy-tumbling act that moves like a streak of lightning, and then introduces Wini Shaw's only competitor for top rating—Sharkey, the Seal, evidently endowed with a human brain. Lischeron and Adams are an exceptional dance team who keep the standard of the bill high. It closes with a patriotic finale, during which Sam Jack Kaufman introduces the new song dedicated to the Navy fliers, "Anchors in the Sky," aided by the Capitolian Quartet in an introductory medley and Miss Shaw to voice the lyrics.

Preliminary to the orchestra's stage overture, a string quartet from among its members, perched atop the organ console, score decisively in a chamber music arrangement of "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes," the whole business meeting with palm-bruising applause.

What did I tell you? I mean about getting down to the National Theater bright and early yesterday morning with your money in your hand. The two extra performances of "Oklahoma"—this Sunday night and next Thursday afternoon—were completely sold out as the clock struck 1 p. m. Of course, your Ration Book No. 4 was more important if that is what detained you, but it was your last chance for "Oklahoma."

Commemorating First Anniversary

Under the auspices of the British Information Service, "Desert Victory," most vivid and realistic of all the war "documentaries" to date, will be presented on the screen at the Department of Interior Auditorium, on next Monday night, October 25, at 8:30, before an invited audience of representatives of British agencies stationed in Washington

This is the film that depicts Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's British Eighth Army's attack on Rommel's Afrika Korps at El Alamein and the resultant chase of the routed Nazis across North Africa. The actual attack was launched on October 22, but its first anniversary is being observed on the twenty-fifth, as the closest date that could be arranged.

There will be a limited number of seats available to the public, which may be obtained by application to the British Information Service, 1336 New York ave. So now you know.

Members of the troupe of 162 star performers presenting Larry Sunbrock's "Wild West Rodeo and Hollywood Thrill Show," who already have arrived in town against Sunday afternoon's opening at Uline's Arena, spent a busy and dizzy day yesterday, putting on special shows for convalescent servicemen in and around the Capital. Their last "stand," as it comes to me, was out at Walter Reed Hospital late yesterday afternoon.

The staff of the March of Time has been wracking its collective brain trying to figure out what possible evil effect Portugal's ceding of the Azores bases to the United Nations could have on their forthcoming release, 'Europe's Crossroads," devoted to Lisbon and the Portuguese, and can't think of a thing to get sore about!

Gossip From Gotham

New York, Oct. 21.

For the past few months there's been some publicity about the possible revaluation of the Mexican peso and a deal for the alteration of the price of silver. These are complicated financial matters, about which the finance reporters have been writing . . . Once, while the President was traveling in his private railroad car, he received a telegram from Secretary Morgenthau concerning Mexico and the peso. It was an involved telegram which the President found confusing. Neither could the others in the President's entourage decipher it. But the President had to reply to Morgenthau. He shrugged, and wired: "Good Old Mexico."

JANE COWL

Andre Maurois, the French writer who left here some months ago to join the French Army in Africa, will be back in the States shortly . . . Noguchi, the noted anti-Fascist artist, who voluntarily went to a Japanese resettlement camp, has returned to N. Y. . . . The Book-of-the-Month Club will become the radio sponsor of the New Friends of Music performances. The broadcasts will be 90 minutes long, without the customary commercial announcements. The only "break" will be a 5-minute interlude, during which Henry Seidel Canby of the Saturday Review of Literature will address the radio audience on "The Beauty of Good Literature."

George Frazier, of Life Magazine, will write a biography of Duke Ellington, for Harper's children's book department . . . Abe Lyman's bags already are packed, for his trip to Africa. Except for one change of underclothes, they contain nothing except 2000 cigars. "I'll go without food, without water, without beds," says Abe, who will be gone four months, "but I can't go without cigars." . . . Jane Cowl prboably will get the starring role in Donald Ogden Stewart's new play. Barney Josephson, proprietor of Cafe Society, will finance the production . . . The film about British women in uniform, which Mrs. Roosevelt reviewed in her column without mentioning the title, is "The Gentle Sex." It's the last film in which Leslie Howard appeared.

Clare Boothe Luce, who naturally expects to be reelected to Congress, made a speech before the Italian-American Club in Fairfield County, Conn. The noted playwright-legislator, mindful of the voting power wielded by these, her Italian-American constituents, left it to a friend of hers to make the arrangements, to assure a happy, vote-getting response. The friend finally decided upon the best way. And that's why Representative Clare Luce was introduced to the Italian-American Club as "Clahrra Lootchay, the bambino who made good."

Mary Elliott, the M-G-M actress, made a tour of the North Atlantic bases. She was the first actress to entertain north of the Arctic Circle. Maj. Gen. Ben Giles decided to honor this event with an unusual celebration. In behalf of his officers and enlisted men he presented a home-made plaque to Miss Elliot—who protested that an entertainer who tours the Army camps finds sufficient reward in the gratification of service . . . "But what did I do to deserve a plaque?" asked the actress during the Arctic ceremonies . . . "This plaque," said the General, "is for having gotten here before Eleanor did."

The arrival of Ambassador W. Averell Harriman in Moscow was a cheerful contrast to the trip he made to Moscow with Lord Beaverbrook. The Axis then was winning on all fronts; but now, less than two years later, Harriman—with Hull and Eden—had come to discuss happier events . . . In that other trip, Harriman flew from Cairo. For 24 hours he set, knee to knee, with General de Gaulle, who was flying part of the way. Their conversation was short. "You're not doing so well," said de Gaulle . . . "But we'll do better," said Harriman . . . "Yes," said de Gaulle . . . And that was all.

HEDDA HOPPER

'Genius' Again on Top!

Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 21.—Count that day lost when Orson Welles isn't announced for another picture. Now Metro wants him to do "Now I Lay Me Down to Sleep," which couldn't be funnier, because when Little Orson Annie finished "Citizen Kane," no producer in town would speak to him. He was the fair-haired boy only to Orson. Now it's becoming universal . . . The stork gave Lynn Bari her chance. She takes Alice Faye's place in "The Bowery." She's also being praised for her job in "Bridge of San Luis Rey" . . . Twentieth Century was all ready to lend Betty Grable for Bob Hope in "Where Do We Go From Here?" until they saw Michael O'Shea in "Eve of St. Mark." Now they want O'Shea . . . Paramount bought "Her Heart in Her Throat" months ago, didn't know what to do with it. But since they saw Gale Russell in "The Uninvited," it's being written as a starring vehicle for her.

BETTY GRABLE

Said It With Music Before

Jack Owens of "Hut Sut Song" in "Hi, Neighbor!" fame, got his first acting break with Mae West in "Tropicana." Now he's been offered a term contract at Warners. In the meantime, he signed for the lead in "Little Jesse James," which opens in San Francisco. He's been here since 1936 and our producers are just giving him a break. Didn't he know that most of them are near sighted? . . . Lurene Tuttle, one of our best radio actresses, spends all her off moments at Santa Ana with her husband, Maj. Mel Ruick, coaching servicemen there for their three air shows . . . Now it's Allen Jenkins' wife who's suing for divorce. He's overseas entertaining the boys . . . The "Hey Rookie" company, yardbirds of Fort MacArthur, are repeating their success in Italy.

All You Need Is Success

Much battling between Bette Davis and Miriam Hopkins in "Old Acquaintance," but Miriam was so good that Jack Warner's searching for another picture for her . . . No movie star ever got the glad hand given Pancho when he decided to double at the Mocambo and Lockheed . . . You can thank Glenn Wheaton for those serious moments of Bob Hope's on the air. Not only was it Glenn's idea that an audience would take him seriously . . . Ketti Frings and her husband built a stable themselves to house Hunt Stromberg's present of a beautiful five-gaited mare . . . Joe Cotten wondering if he'll get two salaries, since he's doing "Gaslight" and "Since You Went Away" at the same time . . . "It sure handicaps a guy," says Roy Roberts, making a test with Linda Darnell with her husband, Pev Marley, photographer.

Time Does It

George Murphy, when he first heard of the Commandos, was so impressed he wrote a story about them, called it "The Chicago Method." Tried to sell it, but studios thought it too fantastic. Now that the Commandoes are everybody's heroes, Metro may buy it . . . Carl Spitz, who first trained dogs for the Army, has more dogs in training then he ever had. Tells me war widows and mothers who never had a pet before are the biggest buyers . . . Sydney Greenstreet has dug in and become a householder. He's a neighbor of Frances Marion, which is O. K. by Frances. He'll be able to help exercise her great Dane and shepherd, and vice versa.

Worth Trying

In Lum and Abner's next, they're wondering if they could open the picture as they are—you know, young men. Then later on make up for their regular radio characters and play the fathers of themselves . . . Arthur Murray, hearing that small camps don't get much attention, offers to send his dance instructresses to those camps to teach new steps to the boys. Their contracts state that they must give so many lessons per week to servicemen.

Unexpected Windfall

Bob Ryan, Ginger Rogers' husband in "Tender Comrade," is Army bound this week. In last scene, in which he bids Ginger good-by, he was furnished a beautifully tailored uniform, handsome bag, and other knickknacks which he supposed were props. After the scene was over they were given him by the company, but with this warning: "In case you're deferred please return unused."
